BULK RATE U.S. POSTAGE PAID CARMEL, CA Permit No. 149

OUR 70TH YEAR, NO. 24 — June 14, 1984

RUGGED beauty of the Carmel coastline is a year-round delight to visitors and residents alike, but particularly in the sun and fog-filled days of summertime. Record numbers of visitors are due to visit Carmel and the Monterey Peninsula this summer, partly because of the Olympics in Los Angeles and the Democratic National Convention.

Schmitz moves fast; pleases council

By MICHAEL GARDNER
(Second in a series)

"Doug Schmitz, once he develops, could be one of the best city administrators anywhere" — Paul Laub, businessman.

"I had him on a pedestal when he first came. Now I'm not so sure" — A former city hall worker.

"Doug Schmitz is running this city with an iron hand. He's only out to make a name for himself" — A local businessman.

IN NOVEMBER of 1983, voters approved a Carmel City Council-backed proposal to require four council votes to fire a city administrator rather than three. It was a vote of confidence for Douglas Schmitz.

In early March, the council granted Schmitz a 3 percent pay increase and an extra week of vacation as rewards for his first year of toil as city administrator.

Today, 16 months after he replaced Doug Peterson as Carmel city administrator, Schmitz is on top of the professional world.

SPECIAL REPORT

He is the bureaucratic head of a resort town where most people only vacation or retire; he enjoys the unqualified support of the city council; even his detractors acknowledge that he is perhaps the best city administrator Carmel ever has had.

But with his workers, Schmitz has more problems than the council and upper echelon city employees want to admit.

Employees who talked anonymously with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook appeared divided. "You either love him or hate him," said one.

Another added that Schmitz is mostly concerned with pleasing his bosses — the council — rather than making an effort to improve employee morale.

Why is Doug Schmitz so popular among the council?

"It's the little things," said Councilman David Maradei. "It's not just one thing. He gets things done, he keeps us informed and he brings out the best in staff."

Mayor Charlotte Townsend uses words such as "outstanding, professional, super, intelligent and energetic" to describe the city administrator.

"He's just simply outstanding. He's professional to his very fingertips. He's full of energy and has a special personality," she said.

"When he says something, you can rely on it," she added. "I have only praise for Doug and the new members of the planning staff."

If there is one thing about Schmitz that worries the mayor it is his seemingly insatiable appetite for work, which is a good

More squid in '85

Dear Editor:

As president of the Monterey Kiwanis Club, I wish to make use of your widely read public forum to say "thank you" to the thousands of local people who supported our first Great Monterey Squid Festival. As with all our projects, the squid fest was a major effort by our club to raise funds for the many charitable programs we support.

Although we worked diligently in planning and advertising, we were nearly overwhelmed by the crush of people who flocked to the fairgrounds for our first staging of this new event. It goes without saying that we simply could not have anticipated such statistics as 4,300 pounds of squid, 1,900 gallons of beer, 500 squid cookbooks, thousands of other food items, hundreds of liters of wine and 22,000 people — all in just 10 hours! It was a pleasant, but challenging, surprise.

We're also grateful for the support of the vendors who accepted the risks of a "first time" venture and valiantly tried to guesstimate how much food and merchandise they would need. Although lines were long and shortages occurred, the vast majority of squid lovers were understanding and supportive.

We learned a great deal from this first squid fest, and I am certain the lessons learned will be put to good use next year to stage a bigger and better event. Interested parties are already contacting us because of the success of Sunday's effort, and our members are now working on the 1985 version.

To festival-goers, we say "thank you!" We appreciate your confidence and support, and we promise more squid, more booths and more fun next year.

'Immoral social programs'

Dear Editor:

For 200 years American prosperity, opportunity, freedom, and moral and physical strength awed the world. Our marvelous founding fathers gave us the best start a new nation ever had.

Although the Constitution guides and inspires us, each new generation must actively protect itself against predators both foreign and domestic if our republic is to endure. Tragically, we have begun to falter.

Witness the decline in our economic lives. Few young people can own a home today, and oldsters find their retirement savings inadequate. Businessmen are taxed, stifled and harried by swarms of government agencies, until survival rather than expansion becomes their goal.

Most of our economic troubles stem from government's clumsy efforts to do "good." Economist Walter Williams points out accurately that for every dollar government gives to someone it must take five from someone else.

The alarming recent growth of government is easily measured by the money consumed. Next year alone the feds will spend as many dollars as they did in the entire 1950s decade. The 1985 rate will be three times the average of the 70s. Curiously, defense, the principal federal responsibility, now gets only 25 percent of the budget. As recently as 1965, defense claimed 40 percent. Thus, the astronomical spending growth has been in the immoral social programs, through which the state steals from the productive to pay the unproductive.

The best hope for restoring American economic health clearly must be via the dismantling of the manifold wasteful, dishonest, "transfer" programs such as food stamps, Medicaid, etc., accompanied by tax reductions.

A useless tradition

Dear Editor:

We like to think of ourselves as a free society who can create our own destiny, yet there are hundreds of thousands of men in this country who are slaves to a useless tradition — the necktie.

If there is one benefit other then being a "soup catcher," it is a mystery to me. In fact, the tie can be dangerous. It's sort of like walking around with a noose around one's neck, just waiting for a hangman. I've never heard anyone claim they liked wearing a tie, but they wear them just the same. Why?

The reason I've heard the most in defense of the tie is that it gives the "professional" a way to be identified as such. Maybe this was true at one time, but if anyone believes that in 1984, he's only a "professional" fool. Maybe "professional" french-fry cookers, department store clerks, and supermarket box boys are "professional," but it ain't the tie that makes them that way.

Don't get me wrong. If someone wants to wear a tie, I have no gripe, but the fact is that there are thousands of male workers across the land who would be fired on the spot if they refused to wear a tie, and that is wrong. The tie only serves as a yoke of servitude and symbol of subjugation to these men.

Just think how silly it would look if a tail on the seat of men's pants were required to work in a place. The style might vary from a horse tail to a rat-like one for long ties, while a corkscrew pig tail could replace the bow tie.

Being clean and neat is a good "dress code." Making a man wear a necktie is an insult. They serve no useful purpose.

TV political coverage

Dear Editor:

Should our tax-exempt contributions and federal matching campaign subsidies be squandered on TV advertising in presidential contests? One minute of network prime time costs upwards of $150,000, and so far this year $80 million has been spent in the Democratic sweepstakes, nearly 80 percent on TV ads. Before the presidential campaigning is over, both major parties will have spent more than $315 million.

It's a national disgrace that millions of dollars are funneled into the fur-lined pockets of TV moguls in order to watch the embarrassing spectacle of White House hopefuls competing with meowing cats and wagging mutts in pet-food commercials.

Most of these 30-second campaign spots appeal to prejudice and ignorance. Clearly, this mindless competition debases the level of political debate and insults the intelligence of voters, many of whom will switch or turn off.

Calvin Coolidge may have been on target when he said "the business of America is business," but even he'd be appalled by the monkey business polluting today's presidential politics. Soap opera politics peddled as television entertainment by superslick image-makers won't cure what ails our troubled democracy.

Voters must regain their rightful influence over the election process by insisting that TV broadcasters provide full and fair debate of the issues as a free public service. The networks will truly earn the right to use our airways if they serve the electorate in a no-nonsense, responsive manner.

Reactionary forces and water district

REACTIONARY forces have made their presence felt in the politics of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District once again.

Although successful candidates for seats on that agency advocated an early date for a bond election on construction of a dam on the Carmel River, there are still those of simplistic bent who are disgruntled.

One of those disgruntled persons is a former candidate — Mark Grover of Pacific Grove. Grover has announced plans to circulate a petition which he hopes to qualify for the November ballot, and which would call for the dissolution of the water management district.

His reasoning is striking in its simplicity: the district should be abolished because it has failed in seven years to construct a new dam.

While there are those who will support any sort of anti-government, anti-bureaucracy effort regardless of merit, it's interesting to note that at least one other vocal critic of the district does not support Grover's effort.

Nick Lombardo, president of Rancho Canada Golf Club, said he feels Grover's petition is premature and indicated he is willing to give directors more time to make good on their campaign promises to support a bond election for a dam at the earliest possible date.

While Grover's petition would, per se, not force dissolution of the water agency, it would "recommend" that the legislature dismantle it; either way, the petition would be a vote of confidence — or no confidence — in the district, the way Grover figures it.

The water management district was created in 1977 by the legislature in response to concerns of Monterey Peninsula residents about availability and management of water supplies, following a severe drought and years of laissez faire operation by California American Water Co.

The agency was created to explore and study various alternatives for water management, and not for the single purpose of building another dam. Although that alternative now seems attractive to many, it was not the sole reason for creation of the district.

Thus, Grover's petition is nothing more than an attempt to torpedo responsible — if sometimes slow and deliberate — actions by the water management district to fulfill its mission. It would be surprising if his petition gathers much political momentum.

Not another drought?

Dear Editor:

New weather forecasting methods, apparently, have made it possible to predict that the Monterey Peninsula will never have another drought like the one that forced us into strict water rationing about seven years ago.

At that time I was a member of the county water advisory commission. During a series of meetings of our group, and several hearings held by the Public Utilities Commission, it was pretty well established that:

- Mainly because of its estimated tremendous cost and some legal roadblocks, the proposed new dam on the Carmel River would probably never become reality.
- The Arroyo Seco dam proposal was impractical because of cost, jurisdictional problems, and possible short life due to silting.
- Tapping Big Sur was impractical for a variety of reasons.
- Some additional wells might increase the yield from the lower Carmel Valley, but their value as sustainers during drought periods was open to question. (Four wells have now been placed there.)
- The Seaside wells were being pumped so heavily that there was danger of losing some of them by salt water intrusion.
- Obtaining water from the Salinas Valley aquifer with wells in Marina or below Spreckels would have been difficult at best, with salt water intrusion already destroying large portions of the water table in the lower Salinas Valley.
- Desalination was dismissed as impractical.
- Reclaimed waste water could be used on golf courses but could not be used for human intake.
- Available sources could at that time meet existing demands under normal conditions but could not meet demands under drought conditions.

The most crucial concern was how to get the P.U.C. to lift its restrictions on water hookups. In desperation, a water management district was formed, and during a sham of a P.U.C. hearing the P.U.C. washed its hands of responsibility and turned the whole matter over to the management district, which has done its job well, with apartments, hotels, and other water requirements springing up in unlimited fashion in every direction, thanks to the long-range forecast that there will never be another drought.

Remove beach fence

Dear Editor:

The fence on Carmel Beach is ugly and repulsive. This fence is not a manifestation of philanthropy. It is the result of private interests and some egocentric developer-environmentalists who are influencing local politics.

Our locally appointed administrators should be controlled by a public interest group to make certain that the community interest is represented. The new fence, which was added on just a few months ago, denies the public access to the public property between Eighth Avenue and Ocean Avenue on the beach.

This is the sand dunes area right in front of several private homes. This is a blatant manipulation of the pseudo-environmental politics in Carmel.

The city of Carmel should have a public vote to remove this blight on Carmel Beach before it starts to grow again.

Residents launch drive against library annex; ask for public hearing

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A PETITION drive against a Carmel City Council scheme to build a library annex directly on Lincoln Street has been launched by a small band of neighborhood residents and business people.

The council plan to build the Harrison Memorial Library annex on Lincoln Street between Ocean and Sixth avenues will generate traffic problems, reduce available parking and spoil an open view to the south, the petition claims.

Circulators hope to present the petitions to the council in early July. They also would like the council to schedule a town meeting on the annex location alternatives.

The council has not yet totally committed itself to the project. However, in previous meetings the majority of the council appeared to support the Lincoln Street location dependent on architectural drawings, cost and successful negotiations with Pine Inn owners for use of the street right-of-way.

The council at its June 5 session agreed to pay approximately $3,500 for concept drawings of the proposed Lincoln Street library addition.

'We feel the interests of the community would be better served if the addition to the library were to be constructed on the two vacant lots (it actually is three lots) which are owned by the city at Lincoln and Sixth and which were purchased by the city for that purpose.'

The library board of trustees is to discuss the hiring of an architect to prepare those concept plans when it meets at 4 p.m. Tuesday, June 19 at Sunset Center.

Architect Don Goodhue told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook that if he is chosen to prepare the drawings it would take about two to three weeks.

The council in a special May 5 study session agreed that the Lincoln Street location is the best alternative for the annex.

That decision is based on the belief that it is better to have the library all under one roof.

The original annex plan envisioned a $1.2 million, 8,000 sq. ft. structure on the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue.

If the annex is built directly on Lincoln Street, that corner property would be freed for other uses, such as senior citizen housing or a combined park and underground parking garage, the council reasons.

The petitions circulated by a handful of Lincoln Street residents and business people claim the original corner proposal is the best location for the annex.

"We feel the interests of the community would be better served if the addition to the library were to be constructed on the two vacant lots (it actually is three lots) which are owned by the city at Lincoln and Sixth and which were purchased by the city for that purpose," the petition says.

'FOR THOSE of us who live and work in Carmel and use Lincoln Street daily to get across Ocean Avenue, thus avoiding the more congested streets to the east (namely Dolores, San Carlos and Junipero streets), closing Lincoln Street is incomprehensible.

"To travel south on Lincoln Street, and instead of seeing a lovely open view, to see only the rear portion of a large building is unthinkable," according to the petition.

The plan also would unjustifiably eliminate parking spaces and limit routes for emergency vehicles, opponents claim.

"We also question the wisdom of eliminating the numerous and convenient 20-minute parking zones used by library patrons, persons who bank with First Interstate Bank, guests of the Pine Inn, and persons who shop in the surrounding area.

"Further, Lincoln Street is frequently used by emergency vehicles to cross Ocean Avenue as it is wider and less congested than other available streets," the petition says.

In a letter to the Carmel Pine Cone/-Carmel Valley Outlook, petition organizer Jane Nieman said about 100 residents and business people had signed the petition by June 8.

"I have personally talked with a number of people about this issue and have found only two out of perhaps 45 to 50 people who were in favor of the concept of closing Lincoln Street," wrote Mrs. Nieman, who is a longtime Lincoln Street resident.

"Others who are circulating petitions have also found virtually no support whatsoever for this proposal."

Many people simply do not know what the council has planned, she added.

"I have also found that many residents are unaware of the council's proposal," Mrs. Nieman wrote.

"Many businesses in the area feel their business would suffer if the street were closed and cannot understand why the city would even think of such an idea.

"Many residents feel the library is a very attractive (and, yes, historic) building, and would hate to see it changed in any way," Mrs. Nieman's letter concluded.

Her son Howard Nieman also has joined the battle to stop the Lincoln Street proposal.

Nieman reiterated the belief that most people do not know what the council has proposed.

"A lot of people don't really know what the city wants to do," he said. "When they find out, there's a lot of opposition."

THE NIEMANS disavow any knowledge of a controversial one-page flyer sent through the mail recently.

The flyers headlined "Help Save Lincoln Street", were sent through first-class mail by a group called "The Committee to Preserve Carmel."

Attempts by this newspaper to learn who is behind the mailing proved fruitless.

The parties responsible for the flyer may have been frightened off by council claims that the mass mailing violated federal postal regulations and could be considered a misdemeanor.

City Atty. Don Freeman told the council June 5 that a mass mailing to more than 200 addresses must contain a return address, which was not included on the flyer.

"It is of a very serious nature," Freeman said.

The council had harsh words about the flyer.

"I resent this type of thing very much," Councilman Robert Stephenson huffed.

"We all do," added Councilwoman Helen Arnold.

"I would pay more attention to it if somebody signed it," Stephenson said.

Councilman David Maradei also complained that the flyer was "filled with inaccuracies."

The flyer claims that the council "has not even sought public comment or review of this proposal, yet they are ready to spend our limited tax dollars for architectural drawings and studies before Carmel residents have expressed their views on this matter."

The flyer states that an annex directly on Lincoln Street would alter the character of Carmel and add to traffic circulation and parking problems.

"Our city council can't seem to determine what is in the best interests of Carmel. They talk of needing a larger city hall, yet the city has not increased in population for many years," the mailing states.

'Our city council can't seem to determine what is in the best interests of Carmel. They talk of needing a larger city hall, yet the city has not increased in population for many years.'

"The council should develop a long-term plan and welcome public comment before spending tax dollars and closing an important street. The council has not even asked for comments from the police or fire departments as to impact on public safety," the flyer claims.

Nieman said neither he nor his mother are responsible for the flyer, but they did receive a copy in the mail. He also defended the right to mail the flyer.

When talking about Freeman's claims that the mailing is illegal, Nieman said: "It just seems to me that free speech went right down the drain."

ELEANOR COX often finds herself taking up an entire table in the reference department to perform her duties as library assistant. The lack of space for staff work is one of the reasons why the city plans to build an annex to Harrison Memorial Library. The library board on June 19 is to talk about hiring an architect to prepare concept drawings for an annex to be constructed directly on Lincoln Street between Ocean and Sixth avenues. Council to have public hearing on garbage rate increase

FOR THE second time in six months, the John Roscelli Corp. has asked the Carmel City Council for permission to increase garbage collection rates in the city.

In a letter to the council, General Manager Bill Parsons has asked for a 5 percent increase in the one can collection charges, which would boost the average resident's quarterly bill from $15.70 to $16.50.

The council will conduct a public hearing on the proposed increase when it meets at 4 p.m. June 19 at city hall.

In December the council authorized a 10 percent increase, but also required that the John Roscelli Corp. provide an expanded cleanup program whereby residents could dispose of all household refuse four times a year rather than the previous one cleanup day annually.

Parsons told the council in his letter that annual company net pretax revenues ($537,831) exceeded expenses ($530,756) by 1.3 percent.

The goal of the company is to have net pretax revenues exceed expenses by 7 percent, Parsons wrote.

The additional 5 percent collection fee also will enable the company to afford to begin its construction of a corporation yard and recycling facility, he added.

In other action, the council is to discuss the "findings of fact" for its April 17 approval of a use permit for Bennett Sculpture to open in the Cottage Row complex under construction at the northwest corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue.

At the June 5 council meeting, Cottage Row owner Craig McFarland asked the council to reconsider its limitation of the application for just "bronze sculpture."

McFarland claims that the designation "bronze sculpture" will restrict future uses in the location if Bennett Sculpture closes or relocates.

And the limited designation also would unfairly restrict Bennett Sculpture if the owners need to expand to another line of art, such as oil paintings or watercolors, he said.

The goal of the company is to have net pretax revenues exceed expenses by 7 percent, Parsons wrote.

McFarland asks that the council change the use permit to allow an "art gallery" designation in that retail space.

Planning intern Brian Roseth told the council that Bennett Sculpture requested a "sculpture gallery" use permit. Thus the permit was issued as per the applicant's request.

The Bennett Sculpture application generated a lengthy council discussion April 17. The board of adjustments had rejected the application on the basis of general plan policies that state the city should restrict the number of new art galleries in town.

One of the reasons the council overruled the planning commission and authorized the use permit was because there are no sculpture galleries in Carmel other than the Bennetts' Carmel Plaza location, Roseth said.

On the advice of City Administrator Douglas Schmitz, the council agreed to place McFarland's request on the June 19 agenda.

The council decision on "findings of fact" to support its April 17 approval of the gallery is important because the board of adjustments still must adopt the conditions that will control the operation of the sculpture gallery.

If the council does not grant an "art gallery" use permit designation, then the board of adjustments probably will attach a condition to the use permit that would allow only a sculpture gallery at that location.

Logan, Barrett named to planning commission

John Logan and Richard Barrett were reappointed to the Carmel Planning Commission by a unanimous vote of the city council June 5.

Logan, a hydrologist, was appointed in 1979 to fill a vacancy and was reappointed to a full four-year term in 1980.

Barrett, an architect, was appointed in 1982 to fill a vacancy created when Robert Stephenson was elected to the city council.

Their fellow planning commissioners had written a letter to the council that supported the reappointments.

Logan and Barrett will be sworn in to their new four-year terms at the June 20 planning commission session.

Low-level city employees unhappy with Schmitz thing since the city has a list of projects that foreseeably could carry into the next decade.

"I'm really worried about burnout," the mayor said.

THERE ARE two traits displayed by Schmitz that the council found lacking in his predecessor — the ability to get things done and a commitment to keep the council informed.

Schmitz has a knack of completing projects nearly as quickly as the council can dream them up, which is quite a feat in Carmel.

But his habit of acting quickly and forcefully recently got Schmitz into some hot water with some of the more vocal businessmen in town.

Schmitz has taken a lot of criticism for his decision to freeze all use permit applications while staff worked on the general plan implementing ordinances.

Schmitz knew that past councils have a history of reacting rather than acting. So this time around, he thought he would put a freeze on applications to give the city a chance to plan ahead.

Schmitz also knew that the council wanted those new ordinances completed quickly, basically out of fear that many developers were trying to slip in under the old ordinances.

Such was the case of several art gallery applications, two downtown building projects and Clyde Sturges' motel proposal for San Carlos Street.

All of the applicants knew they faced possible disapproval of their projects if the proposals were heard under the new, stricter zoning code amendments, which are expected to become effective this summer.

Two months after the freeze order things pretty much have returned to normal at city hall. The ordinances are now before the council and the planning commission is hearing use permit applications.

Schmitz' crowning success, of course, was the timely completion of the Carmel Beach rehabilitation project, within budget projections. Assistant City Administrator Greg D'Ambrosio was the project supervisor under Schmitz.

But Schmitz has had his share of disappointments. The council still has been unable to resolve the long-standing issues of a parking garage at Sunset Center, senior citizen housing, a Harrison Memorial Library annex and remodeling of city hall.

Perhaps second only to his ability to make decisions, the council likes the way Schmitz keeps them informed. He presents clear budgets, detailed background reports and available choices (including the "do nothing" alternative) for just about every decision to confront the council.

AFTER THE meetings, Schmitz prepares what he calls "postmortems." These are reports to the council and staff on actions taken at the meeting and what staff will do to implement those decisions.

Schmitz' operating principle lies somewhere between allowing the council to stumble into decisions and telling members what to do.

Sometimes the council appears to exasperate Schmitz when a simple answer is made into a complex dialogue — complete with public testimony from former mayor Gunnar Norberg.

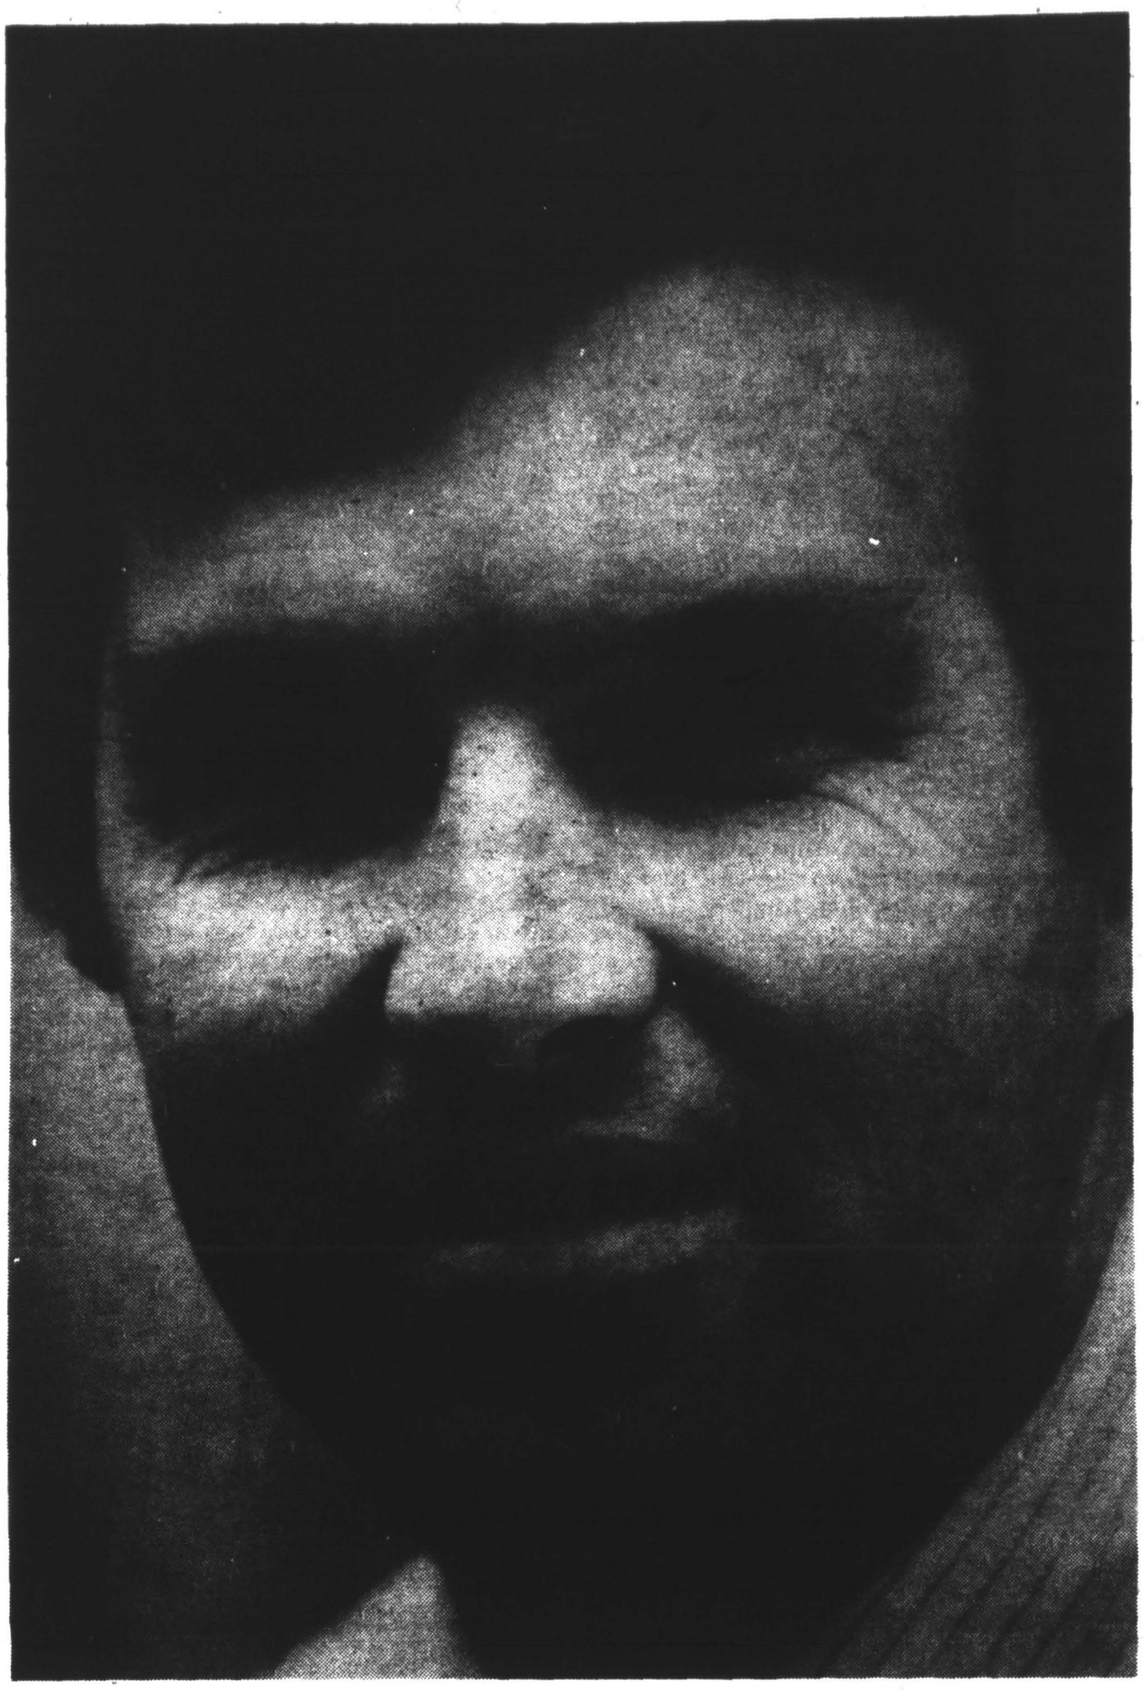
But, remarkably, Schmitz has been able to control the urge to lead the council by its hand. Usually, he sits back and waits for a council member's request to solve the dilemma.

Schmitz follows the principle that staff is to provide only information, and policy decisions should be left to elected representatives.

And Schmitz ensures that his staff acts accordingly.

Schmitz last year ordered Sunset Center Director Richard Tyler to stay away from recreation committee and planning commission meetings on the proposed summer recreation program.

Apparently, Schmitz felt Tyler had lost his objectivity in the controversy between the



"YOU EITHER love him or hate him," said one city employee of City Administrator Doug Schmitz (above). Schmitz, by the very nature of his position, will not please all of the people all of the time. That's certainly true among city employees. Some swear to his allegiance while others say "morale stinks." (Photo by Michael Gardner.)

cultural commission and the recreation committee over the proposed program and how it would be supervised.

Even at council meetings, Schmitz tries to ensure staff neutrality. When a council member's questioning leads into the realm of subjectivity or controversy, Schmitz grasps the microphone and interrupts.

But does Schmitz' popularity extend past the council to the employees, residents and business people?

The answer is a qualified yes.

City administrators, by the very nature of their job, cannot please all of the people all of the time.

In Schmitz' case, he appears to have the support of what one worker calls the "upper echelon," such as his immediate assistants. However, those who work outside city hall — such as police officers, fire fighters, street workers, public works and forestry crews — do not wholeheartedly support their boss, said another employee.

Schmitz does appear to have the support of members of city-appointed commissions and the residents who make an effort to be involved in city affairs.

"I think he's just the greatest thing," said planning commission chairwoman Sandy Swain. "He is what Carmel has needed for years."

Personnel changes at city hall have provided the city "with much-needed young blood," she added.

Ms. Swain also likes the fact that Schmitz is not afraid to make decisions.

'HE'S WILLING to go for it. He makes decisions. And he has an innate sense of our problems. I just think he's great. What more can I say?"

Dottie Lillard, a member of the traffic committee and council meeting frequenter, also sings his praises.

"I think he's doing real well. One thing that impressed me was that even before the beach project started he had called around and found the rocks," Mrs. Lillard said.

A member of the now-disbanded General Plan Advisory Committee, Mrs. Lillard said the new planning staff hired by Schmitz will help the city.

"He is responsible for getting us some very capable people in Brian (Roseth) and Diane (White)."

Brian Roseth is a graduate planning intern and Diane White is assistant planning director.

Betty Guilfoil, a member of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club, worked closely with Schmitz during the Piccadilly park controversy.

"I think he's almost too good for the city. He's so quick in his resources. He gets things done," Mrs. Guilfoil said.

Mrs. Guilfoil likes Schmitz' personal attention to many of the issues.

"He follows up everything. Sometimes the letter is in the mail the same day. He even sends thank you letters," she said.

A couple of ex-mayors, although known to often disagree with Schmitz, still think he's doing a good job.

'I had him on a pedestal when he first came. Now I'm not so sure. He's certainly better than what we had, but I'm not so sure about him anymore. Sometimes he would say one thing to you and then tell someone else something else.'

"I think he's very energetic. He's trying to get the council to settle down and tackle some of the issues," said ex-mayor Barney Laiolo.

"He's doing his part. He can't decide for the council."

Former mayor and longtime councilman Gunnar Norberg, usually on the opposite pole from Laiolo, agrees.

"I think he (Schmitz) is doing a good job. He seems to be earnest, able and interested," Norberg said.

"I'm not on the council. I'm looking at it from the outside, but from where I see it, he's doing a good job."

On the inside, most employees at city hall like their boss, who, they say, is much more friendly and open than Doug Peterson.

"He's silly sometimes, in a fun way. He'll tease, pun and have funny comebacks," said an employee.

But Schmitz can also be tough, as evidenced by the personnel changes.

One employee said Schmitz has the kind of strong-willed personality that doesn't suit everyone.

'DOUG IS strong. He makes decisions and sticks to them," said the worker.

"In his kind of job with his kind of personality, you'll please 50 percent of the people. If you can please half of them, you're doing pretty darn good."

Another longtime employee agrees with that assessment.

"I never have met a man with Doug's kind of character that everyone will like."

Unlike Peterson, Schmitz knows how to get the best out of his employees, the worker said.

"Doug demands loyalty of his employees and he gives the same loyalty. He's a dynamic man. His compassion for his employees does not detract from his leadership.

"He motivates the staff to work at their fullest capabilities. He makes you want to do a good job."

But that statement isn't necessarily reflective of all workers, said one employee who talked to the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook anonymously.

"At first he seemed to be God's gift to Carmel. But he's now insulated from his employees other than the top echelon," the worker said.

"It just seems to me, and to some of the other workers, that he doesn't give a damn. He's just working for the council. He doesn't care about the employees."

One of Schmitz' problems with employees is that he has not earned their trust, the worker added.

[redacted]

"You have to earn trust. It doesn't come automatically with the job. He hasn't done that," the worker said.

The employee also complained that communication has broken down between the city administrator and the "lower echelon" workers.

"The workers outside of city hall are very nervous about talking to him. No one wants to talk to him."

Schmitz communicates by memo rather than in person, which disgrutles some workers, the employee continued.

"We're being swamped by paper. The communication is not being done face-to-face. It's being done by bureaucratic paperwork."

Some employees also are concerned that Schmitz is reluctant to let them make decisions.

"It's like the king has to make all of the decisions," the worker complained.

Because of the alleged problems with Schmitz, the city could lose "a damn good crew," the employee said.

"We have a good crew here. Ninety percent of them are good workers, love the city and love their jobs. But there's an awful lot of people looking for jobs right now."

"I love the city. I love what I'm doing. But I'm looking right now. I can't take the aggravation."

The council needs to realize that morale is not high among its employees, the worker believes.

"If the council only knew there's something rotten in Denmark. The morale stinks," the employee said.

Schmitz also demands a lot of his staff, the employee said. And sometimes, the demands are too much, he said.

"One time an employee was down there and he (Schmitz) was gone and threw a tantrum. 'He treats us like robots. We're not robots,' the employee said. I think that's how some of us feel sometimes."

Another longtime city employee refused to be interviewed for the article even when anonymity was guaranteed.

"We may not be swift, but we're not dumb," was the employees' answer.

A FORMER employee raised concerns about Schmitz' alleged "chameleon" act toward certain employees.

"I had him on a pedestal when he first came. Now I'm not so sure. He's certainly

Council bares its teeth with motel restrictions

By MICHAEL GARDNER

WHAT FIRST appeared to be a light agenda for the Carmel City Council June 5 turned into a two-hour discussion with one key policy decision being made and another controversy renewed.

The council — through unanimous denial of an application for two additional units at the Dolores Lodge — has served notice that it plans to enforce policies in the general plan designed to restrict new motels or the expansion of existing inns.

David Maradei was the most adamant council member opposed to Mallery's request. Maradei, as he has stated throughout the public hearings on the draft ordinances, believes the city should prohibit all new motel units.

On an equally controversial topic, the council agreed to send a letter to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors that will request permission to appoint two city representatives to a citizens advisory panel established to develop recommendations on the design of the proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway.

The Hatton Canyon Freeway and motel issues enlivened a rather dull meeting that was expected to be kept brief because of the latest marathon hearings on the implementing ordinances to the 1983 Carmel General Plan.

Council members have scheduled a public hearing on those proposed implementing ordinances for 4 p.m. June 19 at city hall.

The council invoked those still-unadopted implementing ordinances as part of its reasoning to deny co-owner Tim Mallery's request for two additional motel units at the Dolores Lodge, near the corner of Dolores Street and Third Avenue.

Mallery told the council he had an option to buy a duplex adjacent to the lodge which is now used by an "out of town" owner as a second residence for himself and friends.

Mallery argued that the duplex is used as a transient rental, and that entire block consists of motel uses.

"It (the duplex) is the only 2,800 sq. ft. in the whole block that's not a motel use," he said.

Mallery's request provoked about 30 minutes of discussion on the general plan policies and coinciding draft ordinances that restrict the growth of motels.

David Maradei was the most adamant council member opposed to Mallery's request. Maradei, as he has stated throughout the public hearings on the draft ordinances, believes the city should prohibit all new motel units.

Approval would give motel owners a "license to pick away at residences...motel owners will try to annex adjacent residences to expand. There's going to be little motels all over town."

THERE ARE two key provisions in the general plan that restrict motel growth.

The first policy states: "Prevent the conversion of all uses and structures to visitor lodgings, condominiums or stock cooperatives."

Another, more stringent policy states: "To preserve existing permanent housing and to maintain the vital residential character of Carmel-by-the-Sea, (the city should) prohibit expansion of visitor-oriented commercial uses such as transient rentals, motel or hotel facilities, or retail facilities catering to short term visitors in all zones."

The draft ordinances are more flexible than the "prohibit" wording in the general plan policy. The proposals would allow new motels subject to stringent conditions.

Two of those key proposed provisions would require new projects to be located in a block mostly filled with motels, and require the developer to provide a permanent housing unit for each new motel room.

This "one-for-one" swap was enforced by the board of adjustments recently when it required Clyde Sturges to provide three housing units in return for three motel rooms in his new project on the east side of San Carlos Street between Fourth and Fifth avenues.

Although Maradei is anti-motel, he does not think that the one-for-one trade-off provision would "stand up in a courtroom."

Councilman Robert Stephenson said he is opposed to the motel addition proposal. However, he wanted to refer the application to the planning commission.

The application originally was presented to the Carmel Business License and Code Review Board because under current city ordinances, motels are a "permitted" use in that area. Because it is a permitted use, Mallery thought he needed only an okay from the business board.

But the business board routed the application directly to the city council because of the council's past discussion of the Sturges project and the motel restrictions in the general plan with draft implementing ordinances.

City Atty. Don Freeman has ruled that the city can reject an application based on new policies in the general plan even though existing city codes have not been amended to reflect the provisions in the general plan.

Freeman told council members they could either rule on the application or refer it to the planning commission.

Stephenson favored the latter route.

STEPHENSON did say he had "serious doubts" that the planning commission would approve Mallery's application.

"I would be very happy to deny this application at this very moment. I think the end result (the commission's vote) would be the same," Stephenson said.

The proper procedure, however, is for the planning commission to review the application, he argued.

Councilman James Wright disagreed with Stephenson. "Let's handle it right here, tonight," he said.

The motel issue was not the only controversy to come up at the June 5 council meeting.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold once again made her pitch against the proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway.

Mrs. Arnold argued that the city should be represented on a citizens advisory panel established to make recommendations to CalTrans on the project design.

She said all but one of the seven committee members publicly have supported the freeway concept. R.E. Newton has not supported the project and Earl Moser would oppose the freeway if the environmental impacts cannot be adequately mitigated, Mrs. Arnold said.

"There's hardly anybody on the committee willing to look at the alternatives," she claimed.

A couple of council-appointed members would establish a "balance" on the committee, Mrs. Arnold said.

In addition to Newton and Moser, other members of the committee are George Bestor, Ernest Easterbrook, John Gates, Rockwell Hereford and Louise McKee.

Mrs. Arnold, who in the past has voted to support the Hatton Canyon Freeway, changed her mind earlier this year.

"I've regretted that vote ever since I made it," she said. Mrs. Arnold called support of the freeway "short-sighted" and "selfish."

Instead the city should support widening of Highway 1, which would cost about $1 million, she said.

Mrs. Arnold said the state owns enough right-of-way along Highway 1 to widen it to a full eight lanes.

The council has reluctantly supported the freeway proposal because of the increased traffic generated by drivers that take Junipero Avenue through town to avoid the Highway 1 bottleneck.

The council also is fearful that emergency vehicles cannot move quickly through Highway 1 because of the traffic snarls.

The council did not change its mind June 5. However, it did agree with Mrs. Arnold that a couple of city residents should be on the advisory committee.

That request is to be forwarded to supervisors.

Advisory committee member Moser told the Pine Cone/Outlook June 6 that the panel has not discussed the idea of having more members.

The committee has met only once since its appointment earlier this year. Moser said members are waiting for CalTrans to provide them with a more detailed and updated proposed freeway design.

Schmitz pleases, angers many better than what we had, but I'm not so sure about him anymore. Sometimes he would say one thing to you and then tell someone else something else.

"I think he has the type of personality that you either love or hate. He is a strong person, an enigma and a chameleon."

An insight into how tough Schmitz can be even when he really doesn't want to be is evident even in the incidents with former finance director James Bajari (no longer with the city) and ex-planning director Robert Griggs, who has been reassigned to special projects.

"He really went the length with them. He tried to work it out where they weren't hurt and the city wasn't hurt," one worker said.

Bajari was given a second chance, and Schmitz gave Bajari a clean slate, but the two personalities clashed and Schmitz soon became disenchanted with Bajari's work.

Bajari eventually was reassigned to special projects and disappeared from the city payroll.

One employee said that the reassignment of Griggs is a touchy issue that produced "no winners, only losers."

"I think Doug really tried to be fair, although some people here and in the community don't think so. I saw Doug. I know it hurt him," the worker said.

GRIGGS WAS reassigned and has announced his Jan. 15, 1985 retirement after Schmitz raised concerns about how he handled a couple of major project applications.

Schmitz also voiced concern about Griggs' "buddy-buddy" attitude with certain developers, the employee said.

The Griggs incident has left a bad taste in the mouths of some of the more vocal business people.

Some think Schmitz "railroaded" Griggs out of office just to entrench more deeply as the seat of authority.

"He's trying to take over the city with an iron hand," said one businessman who has pending applications and who asked for anonymity.

"He's planting his own people," the businessman said. "Bob Griggs knows Carmel and the people. Griggs was railroaded out."

A more diplomatic businessman said: "Bob was the rock of Gibralter. Doug has and will take a lot of flack over this one."

"I don't like what he (Schmitz) did. Bob knew us. Doug doesn't. How can you make important decisions when you don't understand our problems?"

Attorney and motel owner Clyde Sturges also critized the Griggs "retirement."

"To me, Bob Griggs should never be out of there. It's a terrible tragedy for the city to have him gone. Who's going to replace him?" Sturges asked.

Griggs aside, Sturges thinks Schmitz merely does what the council tells him.

"I think he's doing what he's instructed to do," he said. "I think that direction is the wrong way, but you can't fault Doug Schmitz for that.

"I have no complaints. I do have complaints about the philosophy that he follows."

Sturges, whose year-long motel project proposal finally was settled in late May, has nothing but praise for Mrs. White and Roseth, who were hired by Schmitz.

"They are technically well-schooled, courteous and attentive. Brian and Diane are doing an excellent job, although that doesn't mean I agree with them."

Businessman Paul Laub, who has had his share of battles with the city council, said if Schmitz can steer toward a "rectitude" philosohpy he will become a good city administrator.

"I think as he develops and realizes rectitude and justice for all is what he should work for — rather than the status quo and the bureaucracy — then he could be one of the best city administrators anywhere," Laub said.

"So long as the watchword is cover your butt first and rectitude second, then there's a problem," Laub continued. "Personally, I have great hopes for the guy."

Grover seeks to disband water management board

By JOE LIVERNOIS

MARK GROVER, a failed candidate for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board of Directors in November, wants the state legislature to disband the agency.

Grover plans to circulate a petition that would call for an election that would advise the legislature to repeal the 1977 Assembly bill that created the water management district.

Efforts to build a new dam on the San Clemente site of the Carmel River would be undertaken by an ad hoc committee Grover said could be called the "Monterey Peninsula Water Augmentation Council."

Grover needs 5,400 signatures on his petition by Aug. 10 to qualify it for the Nov. 6 election.

The public relations man from Pacific Grove and chairman of Monterey County Young Republicans said he believes the district should be dissolved because it has failed to build a dam on the Carmel River after almost seven years.

He also said he believes the water district board has become "the Carmel Valley city council," since five of the seven board members are Carmel area residents.

The petition, which has not yet been drafted, only "recommends" the legislature disband the district. Grover told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook that even if the state fails to dissolve the district, the initiative would be a "vote of confidence, or no-confidence, whatever the case may be."

Board directors, including chairwoman Nancy McClintock of Seaside, consider Grover's petition "an annoyance," but they did call a press conference June 11 to counter some of Grover's charges.

By law, Grover was required to get a signature from Bruce Buel, manager of the water district board, on the legal notice of his intent to circulate a petition. Buel signed the notice, which ran in a local daily newspaper in late May, but not without reservations.

Buel refused to file the document in the district office and attached a note to Grover's document that notes that "the petition appears defective upon its face (and) does not appear to comply with election code. A substantial question exists as to the district board's discretion to call an election on this matter should the document be circulated."

Grover said he does not understand Buel's note, since Grover has not yet fashioned the petition Buel called "defective."

GROVER ADMITS that the election code allows a lot of "legal loopholes" that could invalidate the election, if held. But he said the board should "have a conscience" if voters in the district agree the district should be scrapped.

Grover said he is confident citizens will vote to disband the district, based on comments made to him during his campaign for the water district board last November.

On the other hand, Grover placed seventh in the eight-person race for three water district board election.

And one of the more outspoken and respected critics of the water district over the years — Nick Lombardo, president of the Rancho Canada Golf Club in Carmel Valley — said he does not support the petition.

Lombardo was also an unsuccessful candidate for the water district board in November. His campaign was also based on allegations the board is not moving swiftly enough to finish studies that would bring the proposed dam to a vote.

But Lombardo told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook last week he believes Grover's action is premature.

"I want to give the directors an opportunity to fulfill the pledges of their campaign statements and rhetoric," he said, in reference to statements made by the winners that they would support a bond election for the dam as soon as possible.

"Thus far, they are moving in that direction," Lombardo said. "Though not only very slowly but with a lot of reticence."

He said he believes the "community should consider the bureaucratic body as being non-functioning" if a dam proposal is not on the ballot within two years.

Ms. McClintock called Grover's actions an "annoyance" and "harassment.

"I wouldn't call it a tack on the seat of life," she said. "It's more like a thorn in our toe."

Director John Williams, a Carmel Highlands resident, said Grover's action is "sour grapes, I suppose.

"I doubt very much that anybody who wants a dam would be silly enough to support the petition," he said. "In his campaign, Grover distinguished himself by his lack of knowledge of water issues. This petition is just further illustration."

AT A WATER management district protest hearing for the Carmel River Management Program at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club June 4, Carmel mayor and water director Charlotte Townsend confronted Grover and told him she believes the petition effort is "divisive."

When Grover argued that division was not his intention, Mayor Townsend cut him off and told him it's "not even worth arguing about."

Grover got the same type of reception from Buel when he sought to get Buel to sign his legal notice. At first, Grover said, Buel refused to even acknowledge the document.

On Grover's insistence, Buel called David Laredo, the water district attorney, and got a legal opinion. He finally stamped the document, but only after he kept Grover waiting in the lobby for about 45 minutes.

Grover said he chose the initiative, rather than a recall of board directors, because "this isn't a personal thing. I have nothing against Pat Bernardi. I have nothing against Dick Heuer. It's not just these guys; it's everyone who has served on the board."

He said he believes the district was established solely for the purpose of "augmenting the water supply" and its best chance of doing so is to build a dam on the Carmel River.

Grover said he chose the initiative, rather than a recall of board directors, because 'this isn't a personal thing. I have nothing against Pat Bernardi. I have nothing against Dick Heuer. It's not just these guys; it's everyone who has served on the board.'

The district has proceeded with an environmental impact report on a dam on the San Clemente site of the Carmel River with 18,000 ac. ft. storage capacity that would produce 5,000 ac. ft. of potable water per year.

An acre foot is 325,851 gallons.

However, the environmental analyst the district board hired last year, Fred Adjarian, quit to take a permanent position for a planning department in a Southern California city earlier this year.

The district has not yet replaced Adjarian and the environmental review process has been halted until a replacement is found.

Ms. McClintock told the Pine Cone/-Outlook the district has spent about 86 percent of its project budget in studies and reports to gain more information on the dam.

Carmel school trustees review seventh period at the middle school

ON THE same evening it is to adopt the 1984-85 tentative budget, the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education next week is expected to once again review the long-standing plan for a mandatory seven-period day at the middle school.

Trustees also will tackle a couple of high school renovation proposals, the elementary school split busing program and the costs of after-school athletics when they meet at 7 p.m. Monday, June 18 in the middle school library on the campus on the south side of Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

The mandatory seven-period day proposal has been sought by this board and former trustees for the past several years. However, the plan is abandoned each year because of its approximately $85,000 cost.

Current trustees consider the seven-period day concept a top priority. Middle school students during recent registration enrolled for the extra class just in case the proposal is adopted.

Trustees see the seven-period day as a way to expand curriculum offerings so students can meet graduation requirements and still be able to take several electives.

Currently, student elective programs are limited because of the increased number of requirements they must pass to enter the ninth grade.

To offer a seven-period day, administrators have projected that the district will have to hire an extra four teachers to complement the current 19-member staff.

Trustees also would have to establish new school hours for the seven-period day concept. Currently, the 455 students attend six 55-minute classes.

Supt. William Rand is expected to report to trustees on the cost of the proposal and how it could be implemented. That report was not completed by press deadline.

In other action, Rand also is expected to report to the board on the costs of the extra busing required for the split reading programs at Tularcitos School in Carmel Valley and River School.

Currently, starting times for the kindergarten through third grade students are staggered so the size of the reading classes can be kept small, Rand explained.

His report was still under preparation by press deadline.

In another report, high school athletic director Monty Feekes and principal Marsha Kading-Kelly are to inform the board on the comparative per year costs of after-school sports programs.

Trustees also will consider proposals to include the photography laboratory and the cafeteria in the approximately $600,000 high school renovation project to begin this summer.

Business Manager Ed Miyasaki is to present trustees with a technically balanced $6.7 million 1984-85 budget.

However, the tentative budget does not include funds for staff pay increases ($50,000 for each 1 percent hike) or for a reserve (usually $100,000).

Trustees are required by law to adopt a balanced tentative budget. A final budget is expected to be reviewed and adopted this summer after Gov. George Deukmejian approves the state public education financing budget.

Police distribute dog information

Increasing numbers of complaints about the misbehavior of dogs — and their owners — in the business district, residential area and on the public beaches of Carmel have led Carmel police into a campaign of education for the owners.

A "dog owners' responsibility sheet" (below) will be issued with each application for a new dog license from now on, according to Carmel Police Chief Jack McGilvray. "Dog owners just aren't aware of all the city's laws and regulations about their pets," Chief McGilvray said, "so we have put it all together for them."

DOG OWNERS' RESPONSIBILITIES (Carmel-by-the-Sea)

1) REMEMBER! No dogs in the business district, residential district or on the public beach, unless:

a. Guide dogs for the blind.

b. Restrained or led by a chain, strap, or cord that is attached to its collar and actually held by some person.

c. Tied up to some stationary object.

d. Under voice command.

2) What is voice command?:

a. Dog must not be more than 25 feet from the person in control.

b. Dog will return to within three feet of the person on command.

c. Dog will remain within three feet of the person when other people or animals are present.

d. Person in control shall carry a chain, strap, or cord with them.

3) No dogs in Devendorf Park under any circumstances, except:

a. Guide dogs for the blind.

4) Female dogs in season or heat who run at large, shall be seized and impounded.

5) No dogs shall enter any grocery store, meat market, fruit or vegetable store, or restaurant, except:

a. Guide dogs for the blind.

In Lucia redwood area

Lumber company must convince court why it should cut trees

ATTORNEYS for Scarborough Lumber Co. have until June 21 to convince Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver why the firm should be allowed to log 35 acres of redwoods near Big Sur.

Judge Silver issued a temporary restraining order Monday, June 11 which prohibits the California Department of Forestry from issuing a logging permit.

The action followed a hearing last Friday on the plan at Department of Forestry offices in Monterey where attorneys, monks and professors testified with a passion at the public hearing. The monks from the New Camaldoli Hermitage near Lucia live adjacent to the 80-acre canyon in which Scarborough intends to cut 35 acres of redwoods.

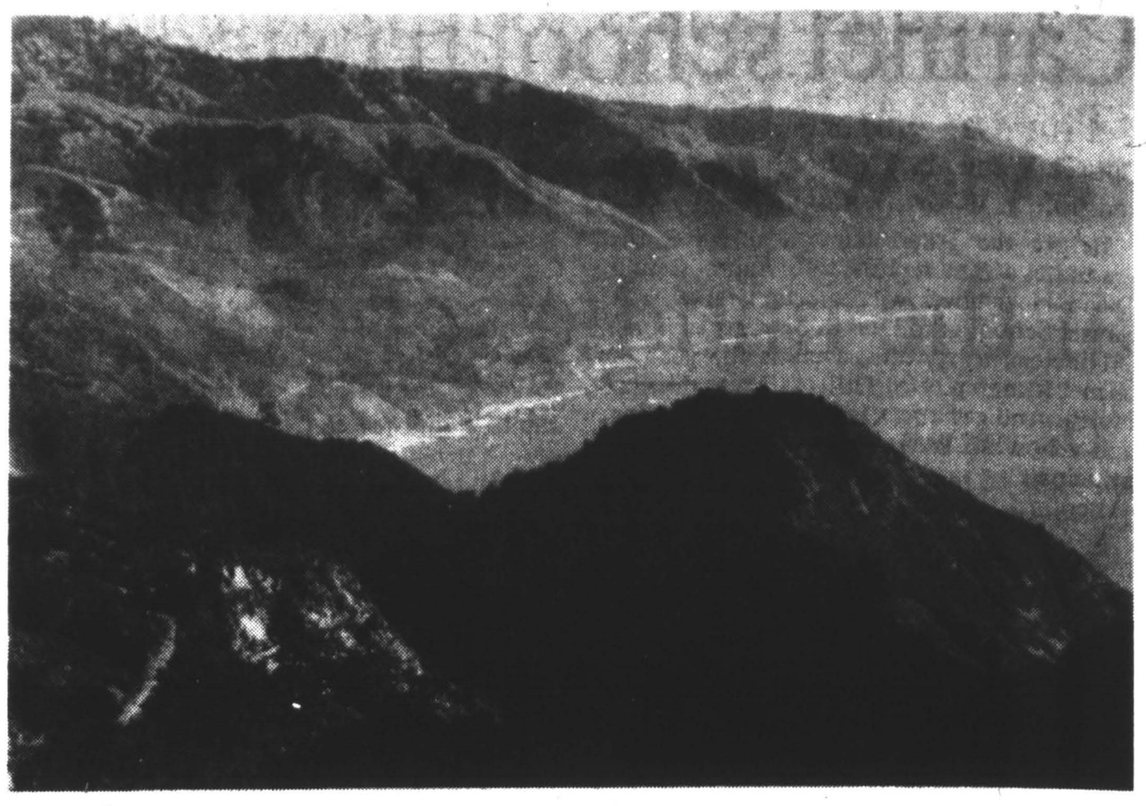
Zad Leavy, a Big Sur attorney who represented the hermitage, verbally ripped the timber harvest plan to shreds in an effort to prove the timber harvest plan is not the "functional equivalent" of state-required environmental reviews for activities on private land.

In fact, Leavy's rabid line of questioning, in which Scarborough registered forester Ted Tsudama often responded "no comment," was interrupted on several occasions by forestry department officials who reminded Leavy the public hearing was not a court of law.

Leavy questioned whether the timber harvest plan submitted by Scarborough adequately addresses potential effects of logging operations on erosion, drainage, and shared private road access, as well as the visual impact a new proposed road would have on the "scenic viewshed" in Big Sur.

Scarborough can begin cutting redwoods in the canyon divided by the west fork of Limekiln Creek as soon as the forestry department reviews trees marked by Scarborough for cutting.

But Tsudama told the forestry department he is not certain when the company will proceed with the logging operation. He also said he did not know how many trees would be cut.



A NEW ROAD would be needed to haul logs from the proposed logging site at Limekiln Creek would have this incredible view of the Big Sur coastline. Attorneys for the New Camaldoli Hermitage in Big Sur say the new road would be visible from Highway 1. (Photographs by Gabriel Kirby.)

However, the state forestry department can only process the paper work for the timber permit — but not issue it — under Judge Silver's temporary restraining order.

IF NOTHING ELSE, Leavy and Robert Halperin, an attorney for the Cowell Foundation, another adjacent property owner, made it abundantly clear at the hearing that a court fight would be pending.

Halperin said Cowell would take "immediate recourse" to the courts once the timber harvest plan is adopted.

"Scarborough should withdraw its plan before the economic consequences of their actions are felt by the loggers," he said.

Camaldolese monks and brothers also expressed their opposition to the logging operations. About a dozen hermits attended the meeting, including Brother David, who complained to the department of forestry that the hermitage had only three weeks to prepare its opposition.

"This is being railroaded through in terrific haste," he said. He also said Scarborough officials have shown "absolute disregard for the interests of the people who live around here."

On the other hand, Hillary Lipman, a Palo Colorado resident and a veteran of Big Sur logging wars, told the Carmel Pine Cone/-Carmel Valley Outlook he was astonished Scarborough has allowed the monks, scientists and professors on the property to build up a case against the proposed logging operation.

When Palo Colorado residents battled Philo Lumber Co. after Philo submitted a timber harvest plan to log property adjacent to Palo Colorado last year, Lipman said, Philo officials never allowed them on the property.

Nevertheless, members of the hermitage said the logging operation will destroy the sanctity of the area. "We're not dealing with just another tree here," Brother David said.

Brother Bruno Barnhart said the hermitage was established on the Big Sur coast 26 years ago because of the "unspoiled sanctity" of the area.

The professors, including University of California at Santa Cruz geologist Robert Curry and University of San Francisco environmental scientist Phillip Clint, said trees in the canyon should not be cut for several environmental reasons.

Leavy's rabid line of questioning, in which Scarborough registered forester Red Tsudama often responded 'no comment,' was interrupted on several occasions by forestry department officials who reminded Leavy the public hearing was not a court of law.

CURRY SAID the redwoods in the canyon are unique because they are not coastal redwoods and are "genetically different" from other redwood stands found along the Big Sur coast.

Monterey County Fifth District Supervisor William Peters also voiced opposition to the proposed logging operation.

He said the county was concerned with the "timing" of the timber harvest plan application, since new rules are being drafted by the forestry department that would apply to the "special circumstances" of the Big Sur area.

Peters' appearance at the public hearing came on the day voters in the Fifth District

PUBLIC HEARING

The City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea will hold a public hearing on ordinance No.84-14 amending party X of the municipal code redefining commercial land use boundaries, the distribution of land uses, and the development regulations within each district in conformance with the city's general plan. The meeting will be held 19 June, 1984, at 4:00 p.m. at City Hall located on the east side of Monte Verde street between Ocean and Seventh Avenues. All members of the public are invited. 1931 Sunset class to have reunion

THE 1931 graduating class from Sunset Elementary School will have a reunion of its own on June 16.

Before the grand reunion of all Sunset graduates at 3 p.m. June 16 in Sunset Center, David Hagemeyer will entertain fellow 1931 Sunset School graduates in his Carmel home.

Nineteen thirty-one. That is the year the term "Running, Not Drifting" was the class motto. And get this. Class colors were orange and yellow. O.W. Bardarson was the school principal.

Bernard "Buzz" Schulte told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook that 20 of the 35 graduates from the 1931 class have said they will attend Hagemeyer's luncheon reception.

Many of them have remained Carmel area residents. They include Schulte, Jean Leidig Draper, Neil Weston, Clifford Leneve, Hagemeyer and Dexter Whitcomb.

Others who said they will attend are Norman Bayley of Santa Monica, William Durney of Petaluma, Robert Kennedy of Malibu, Geraldine Overhulse Dufur of Pacific Grove, Nancy Weill Costello of Monterey, George Coblentz of Menlo Park, Pansy Daegling Kraus of San Diego, Edwin Hare of San Francisco, Elizabeth Vansant Eames of Etna, Nels Edquist of Fresno, Moylan Fox of Menlo Park and William Veatch of San Pedro.

Daniel Lockwood was located in his home in Long Beach, but will be a no-show because he will be overseas this weekend.

Alumni of the 1931 graduating class have not been able to contact eight former classmates, including Maxine Arnold, Theresa Marrapo, Lottie Soto, Dorothy Clark, Theora Foster, Norma MacDonald, Caroldean Murphy and Bernice Trowbridge.

Six graduates have died in the 54 years since they left Sunset School, including Harold Wall, George Petty, Mary Stewart Lowe, Kevin Wallace, Joe Schoeninger and Joyce Burtt.

City recreation classes start June 18

CLASSES IN the first city-sponsored recreation program for local youth are to begin June 18. There still is room in several of the classes.

The program — offered in conjunction with the Carmel Unified School District — includes day-long child care, arts and crafts, and tennis, soccer, volleyball and basketball clinics.

Parents can register their children for one or more of the classes. The classes can be taken in conjunction with the day care. Classes are limited to specific age groups, depending on the program.

The day care program is 75 cents per hour from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. There are several different payment plans.

Cost of most of the classes ranges from $10 to $20 with non-city residents required to pay an additional $5.

Registration will be taken weekdays from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. at Carmel River School, southeast corner of Monte Verde Street and 15th Avenue. After June 18, registration is open from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Special Saturday registration will be from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. June 9, June 16 and July 14.

Parents or guardians must register their children. Proof of residency also is required.

In conjunction with the Carmel Foundation, the program will offer a free swimming class for senior citizens.

The swimming program for seniors over 60 will be from 12:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Transportation will be provided from the Carmel Foundation.

For more information on the swimming program, contact the Carmel Foundation 624-1588.

were at the polls to select his successor.

He told the forestry department he believed the timber harvest plan "misstated" the potential for hazard when it said the potential was "moderate." He said it should have been listed as "high," especially since the plan submitted states logging operations could take place on the property during winter months.

Brother Gabriel of the hermitage also said he was concerned with plans to log during the winter because excessive winter rainfall could cause serious damage to the area. He noted that hermitage records indicate it has rained more than seven inches during a 24-hour period twice since the hermitage has been there.

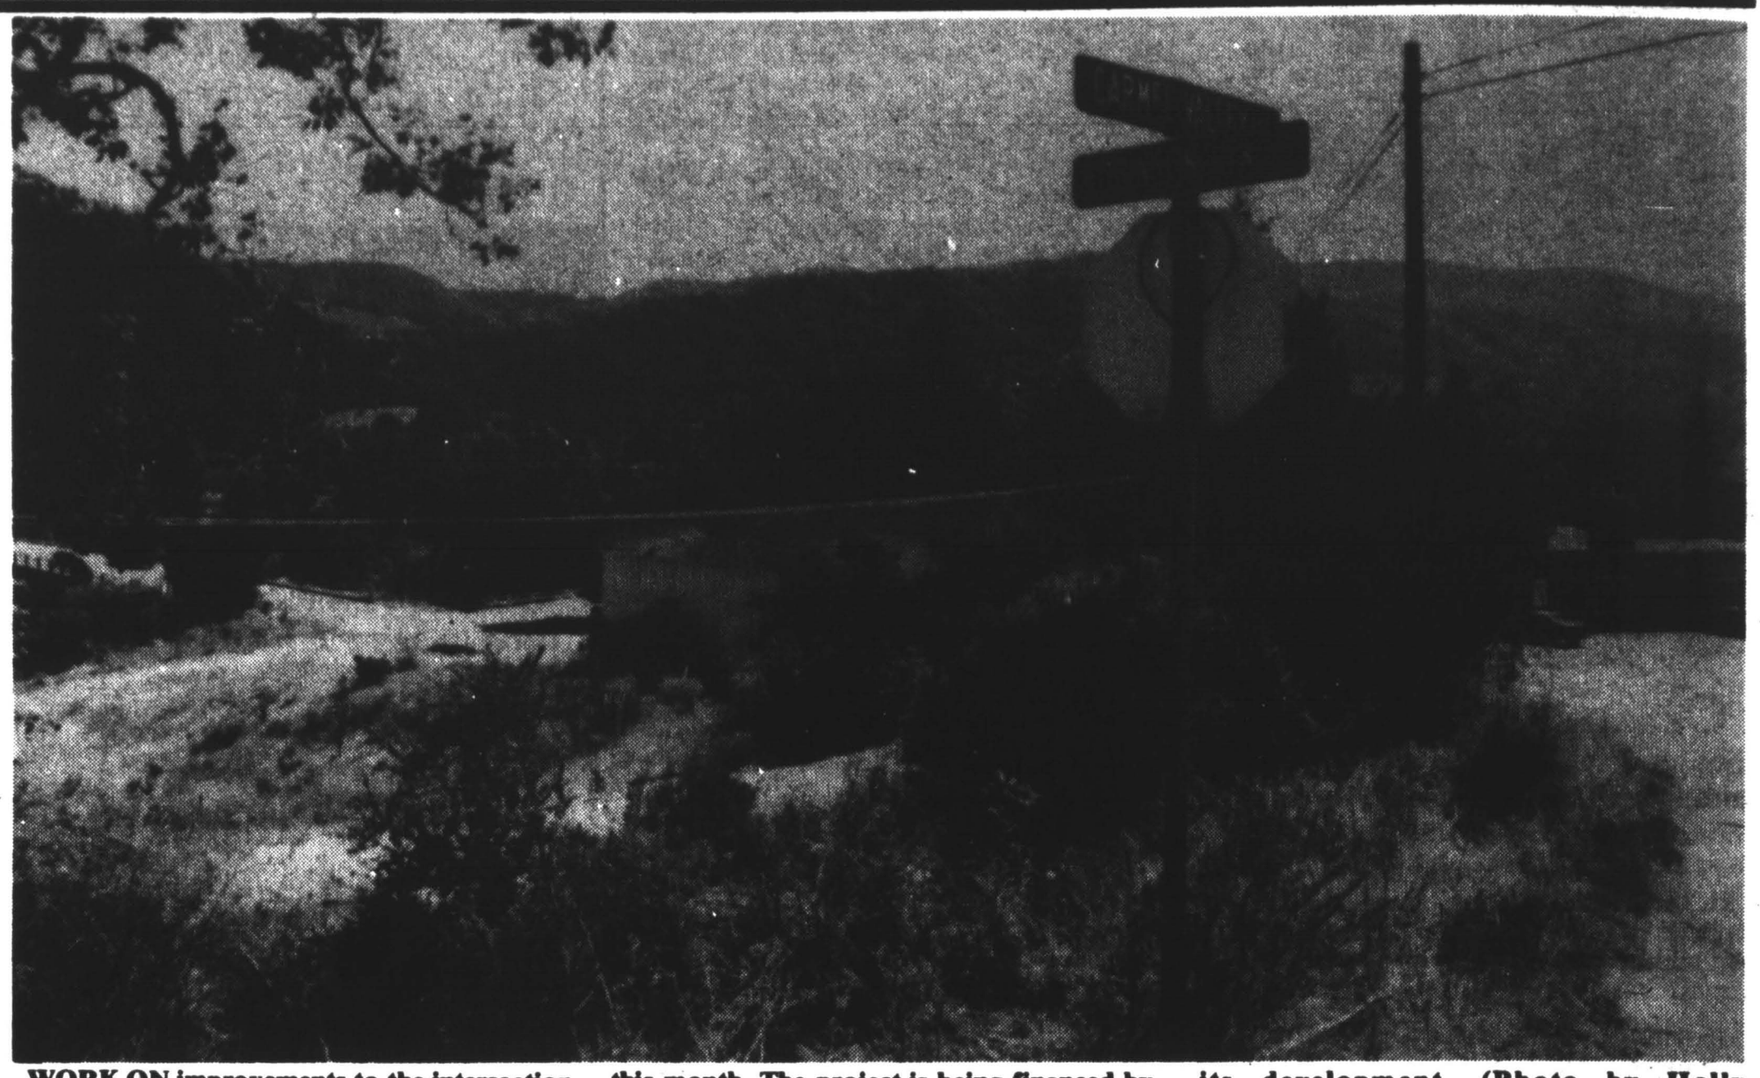
CARMEL VALLEY PERSPECTIVE

Intersection work begins this month



WORK ON improvements to the intersection of Carmel Valley and Robinson Canyon roads in Carmel Valley is scheduled to begin this month. The project is being financed by the adjacent Carmel Valley Ranch under the agreement with supervisors that allowed for its development. (Photo by Holly McFarland.)

AFTER ABOUT five years of bickering, delays, court action and high emotion that seem to accompany every Carmel Valley project with the Landmark Lands Co. brand on it, the $1.48 million intersection project at Carmel Valley and Robinson Canyon roads is to begin this month.

The project, in which a tunnel will be built below Carmel Valley Road to allow easy westbound access from Robinson Canyon Road, was needed to handle the increased traffic that will generate from the 600-unit Carmel Valley Ranch.

Landmark Lands Inc., the Carmel Valley Ranch developer, will pay for the cost of the intersection project, as required by conditions imposed by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors when it approved the Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan.

The ranch specific plan allows Landmark to build up to 500 condominium units and a 100-unit resort lodge at Carmel Valley Ranch.

The design of the intersection work was the subject of emotional debate in 1980, and when the Monterey County Board of Supervisors adopted a design that would have extended Center Street, Carmel Valley Ranch neighbors fought the proposal bitterly.

Supervisors later scrapped the Center Street extension plans in favor of the tunnel. But attorneys for Carmel Valley resident Virginia Merz then sent the entire proposal to court, alleging the intersection plans needed more environmental review.

With the lawsuits resolved, the Monterey County Public Works Department advertised the job for bid earlier this year and Granite Construction Co. was the low bidder at $1.48 million.

Richard Wenzlik, division engineer for the Monterey County Department of Public Works, said the project will take nine months to complete.

Two lanes of traffic will remain open to handle through traffic during construction of the tunnel.

Wenzlik said traffic engineers figure that single-family homes generate an average of between seven and 10 trips daily. In the case of Carmel Valley Ranch, up to 5,000 more automotive trips could pass through the intersection daily by residents of the subdivision.

Fewer trips are generated from resort units, he said.

Wenzlik said some excavation would take place near the intersection work but the resulting scars would be healed with new landscaping.

MISSION RANCH Resort owners have submited to the Monterey County Planning Department a tract map that asks for permission to demolish the current motel units and to replace those with 45 houses and 16 condominiums. Mission Ranch seeks authority to rebuild

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE HISTORIC Mission Ranch Resort motel units, farmhouse and barn would be demolished and replaced by homes and condominiums, under a tentative tract map filed with the Monterey County Planning Commission.

The Mission Ranch Corp. plans to develop 45 single family homes and 16 condominiums on the approximately 21-acre site just southwest of the Carmel City limits, county planner Janet Brennan told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook June 11.

The city council has joined forces with 'The Concerned Neighbors of Mission Ranch' to hire for $3,800 a hydrologist and biologist to prove that development should not be allowed in the wetlands, riparian habitat and the 100-year floodplain.

The housing portion of the project will encompass eight acres while 12.5 acres will be considered "permanent open space," Mrs. Brennan said.

The open space designation is for the area that the Monterey County Board of Supervisors eventually determines to be protected wetlands, floodplain or riparian habitat.

It will "take a long time" before the proposal is presented to the planning commission because an environmental impact report will have to be certified before the application is considered, she added.

The application "is consistent" with provisions for that area in the Monterey County General Plan, Mrs. Brennan said.

Meanwhile, the controversy over the definition of "wetlands" — which eventually is to determine the size of the subdivision — is to be debated by supervisors when they meet at 11 a.m. Tuesday, June 19 in the county courthouse in Salinas.

The wetlands issue was raised by the Carmel City Council — a longtime opponent of intensive development at Mission Ranch — as part of an application by the corporation to rezone the property from solely single family residential to visitor-serving.

The rezoning is designed to bring the Mission Ranch Resort in conformity with the zoning classifications for that area as listed in the general plan and the Carmel Area Local Coastal Program.

THE COUNCIL has not protested the rezoning. However, it does want to ensure a low-density use for that area by arguing that some of property should be declared off limits to development because it is in the wetlands, in the floodplain and in the riparian habitat area.

The general plan and LCP for that area dictate subdivision density on the basis of acreage. The less acreage designated as protected wetlands, floodplain or riparian habitat, the more land that the corporation will have available for development.

The city council has joined forces with "The Concerned Neighbors of Mission Ranch" to hire for $3,800 a hydrologist and biologist to prove that development should not be allowed in the wetlands, riparian habitat and the 100-year floodplain.

Hydologist Tom Harvey, a retired professor from San Jose State; and biologist Robert Curry, a professor with UC Santa Cruz, represent the city, and the Mission Ranch neighbors.

Harvey and Curry argued before the Monterey County Planning Commission May 25 that the county should allow for development only on the acreage not designated as wetlands, floodplain or riparian habitat.

Harvey argued that only 10.4 acres should be used for construction while Curry believes that all but six acres should be protected from development.

But the Mission Ranch Corp. hydrologist — Linda Fox of Stanford University — successfully argued that the county should allow development on all but 4.68 acres of wetlands area.

The planning commission adopted a resolution that recommends supervisors allow a development of up to 75 units on the Mission Ranch Resort property at a density of two to six units per acre.

The planning commission adopted a resolution that recommends supervisors allow a development of up to 75 units on the Mission Ranch Resort property at a density of two to six units per acre.

Commissioners also endorsed Ms. Fox's recomendation that only 4.68 acres be set aside as wetlands.

Carmel Assistant Planning Director Diane White told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook June 11 that the city will argue against Ms. Fox's figures in an effort to increase the acreage set aside as wetlands.

The city also believes the commission did not provide an adequate analysis of the floodplain before it recommended approval of development in area the city considers floodplain, Mrs. White said.

The council wants to restrict development at Mission Ranch because of the potential impacts a large-scale subdivision would have on on traffic, water supply, sewage capacity, pollution and noise.

Budget allows for beach repairs

By MICHAEL GARDNER

FUNDING TO begin renovation work on Sunset Center and city hall — two buildings of current and historic importance in Carmel — is the cornerstone of the tentative $5.7 million 1984-85 municipal budget.

In addition, the tentative budget allocates $410,000 for phase two of the Carmel Beach rehabilitation project. The funds are to be primarily used for six new access stairways and the landscaping to repair banks and replace stairways destroyed by the 1982-83 winter storms.

The tentative budget also includes $1.2 million in reserves expected to be generated from the unbudgeted hostelry tax fund ($801,000) and the general fund (mostly from sales tax) reserve of $458,977.

If figures in the tentative budget hold true after negotiations, city staff will receive a 7 percent increase in pay. The budget allocates an additional $149,500 to salaries, which works out to a 7 percent pay hike for employees.

But the new budget represents no more than last year's budget: both the 1983-84 and tentative 1984-85 budget are $5.7 million.

The Carmel City Council is to conduct its first public review of the budget when it meets in a special study session at 4 p.m. Thursday, June 14 at city hall.

Mayor Charlotte Townsend also has scheduled three other special budget sessions, all for 4 p.m. at city hall. The dates are: Thursday, June 21; Tuesday, June 26; and Thursday, June 28.

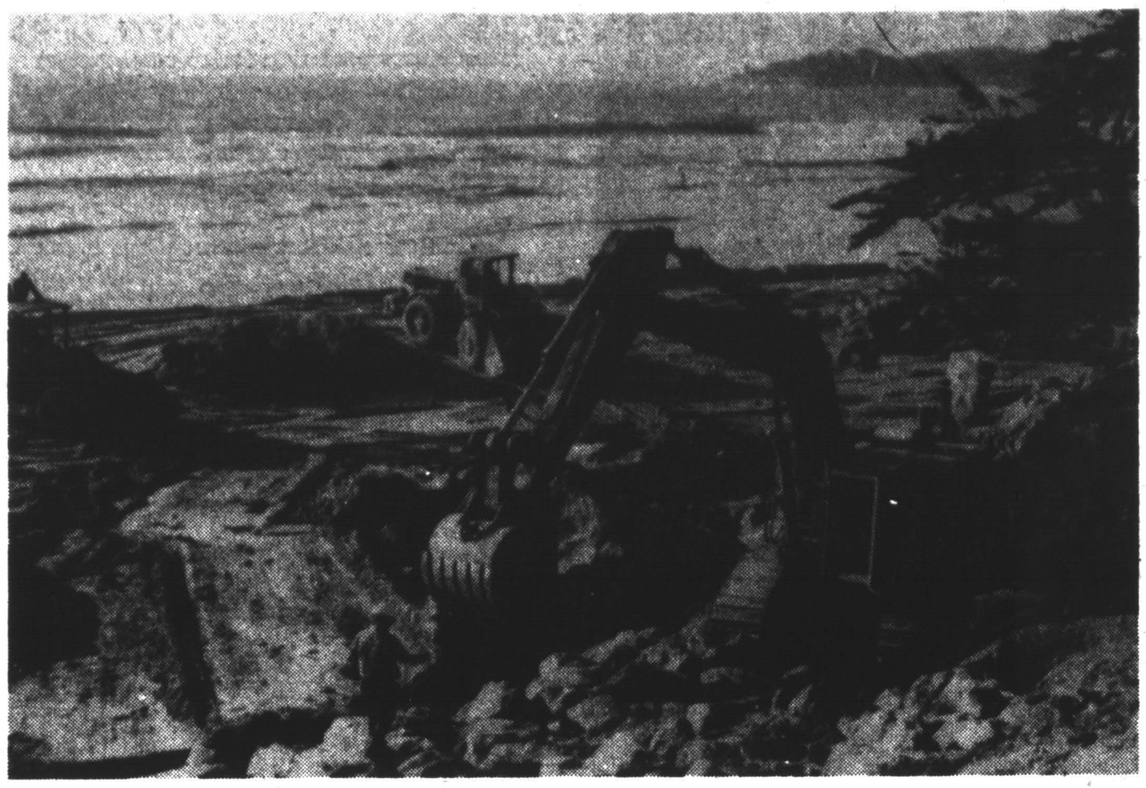
The tentative 1984-85 city budget to be presented to the council actually is a two-year proposal, City Administrator Doug Schmitz told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook June 11.

Schmitz plans to add 3 percent to each item in the budget for fiscal year 1985-86. In May of 1985 the council will review that 3 percent increase to determine if more or less should be allocated for certain major expenditures.

This two-year budget plan is expected to save the city approximately $38,000 in staff time, Schmitz said.

"In February the budget team sat down and said, 'This is an absurd way of doing things; using four staff members for four months to prepare a one-year budget,' " Schmtz explained.

The two-year budget concept fits in perfectly with Schmitz' recommendation that the council renovate city hall and Sunset Center over a couple of years rather than placing a strain on financial resources in one year.



FUNDS FOR phase two of the Carmel Beach rehabilitation project, which is to cost an estimated $410,000, are included in the tentative 1984-85 muncipal budget to be presented to the Carmel City Council June 14. Above, crews worked on the $600,000 phase one project, which cost the city about $600,000.

THE CARMEL Community and Cultural Commission has recommended that the city renovate Sunset Center, which used to be a school house for local students.

Schmitz proposes that the city spend about $140,000 on phase one of the Sunset Center renovation project.

The funds are to be used for the major electrical work and repair of damage caused by termites, Schmitz said.

Second year funds will pay for mechanical and structural repair work, he said.

Schmitz also proposes a two-year renovation plan for city hall, a former church on the east side of Monte Verde Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

The council in the past had discussed a $300,000 proposal to expand city hall, make structural repairs, and install new seats and sound system in the council chambers.

Those plans were placed on the back burner last year as the council thought about moving city hall to either Harrison Memorial Library or to the Carmel Presbyterian Church, southeast corner of Junipero and Ocean avenues.

But voters rejected a scheme to relocate the libray to Sunset Center so that idea was dropped. Presbyterian Church officials recently told the council they are not interested in selling the church property.

Schmitz proposes that the council allocate $140,000 for the first phase of a city hall remodeling project.

The money would be used to build additions to city hall onto the north and south driveways. Some renovation work also would be done to the interior of the building, Schmitz recommended.

The council chamber will be remodeled under phase two in 1985-86, he added.

The tentative budget also includes funds for seven other major projects in addition to the beach, city hall and Sunset Center proposals.

Schmitz proposes that the council allocate $181,000 for a detention pond at the southern end of Mission Trail Park near Rio Road.

The pond would catch runoff and keep it from swamping Rio Road, which has been damaged by storm water because the drainage pipe has not been large enough to keep up with the flow, Schmitz said.

The pond would keep the water running through the pipe slowly as to not spill over onto Rio Road, he added.

A $75,000 computer system for city hall also is included in the budget. The council earlier this year had a consultant prepare a report on the computer needs of the city.

SCHMITZ PROPOSES that the council also allocate $35,000 to paint several city buildings. "I don't think some of these buildings have been painted in years," he said.

Through his budget, Schmitz wants to make a major change in the city policy regarding purchase of police cars.

In the past the city would buy "an entire fleet" every few years. That policy placed a "financial strain on the city every couple of years," he said.

Instead, Schmitz wants to start a replacement program and buy one or two cars a year. That program will cost an estimated $28,000 annually.

A transportation study to report on traffic, circulation and parking problems in the city is included in the budget at a cost of about $19,000.

The study is recommended by the planning department to be completed before staff prepares implementing ordinances to the circulation element of the 1983 Carmel General Plan.

The budget allocates $16,500 for a storage facility at the public works department for what is reportedly the city's first fire truck on wheels — a 1923 Luverne.

The truck is being restored by the fire department volunteers and is scheduled for a paint job in San Jose next month.

The fire truck was stored at the Carmel Highlands station, but that department needed more space so it has been moved to a Carmel Valley location, Schmitz said.

The tentative budget does not include funding to add to the 93-member city employee staff. However, Schmitz does proposes some "realigning" of positions.

Schmitz wants to add a "personnel officer" to develop policies, benefits program, job classification study update, counseling program and a recruitment program.

Public hearing on zoning ordinances scheduled June 19

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THINGS SURE don't change much in Carmel politics, even in the past 60 years.

It was in early 1924 that city voters rejected by a mere two-vote margin a plan to implement the first zoning code ordinance for the city.

The ordinance would have established zones to separate most of the commercial enterprises from the 40-by-100 foot residential lots in the town famous as a writers' colony, as a resort community, and as second home to Stanford University professors.

Zoning soon became a fact of life in Carmel and across most cities in the USA. The laws soon became more complex and the words more bureaucratic as professional planners invented new zones such as R-4 (apartments) and C-1-S (commercial service).

One constant that has remained in Carmel for the past 60 years is the seemingly eternal struggle by residents to stave off business encroachment through more controls.

On the other side of the battle, merchants want less regulation.

So has it been and so it is today as the Carmel City Council continues its review of the implementing ordinances to the 1983 Carmel General Plan.

The council has scheduled a public hearing on the implementing ordinances for 4 p.m. Tuesday, June 19 at city hall.

Many of the more vocal businessmen in town denounce the ordinances as too strict, especially in the areas of zoning boundaries and controls on so-called "tourist-oriented" businesses.

Supporters of the ordinances claim that Carmel has been taken over by tourists and this is a last stand in the long-running battle to preserve the "residential character of the village."

As Mayor Charlotte Townsend said recently: "All they (merchants) see are dollar signs in front of their eyes."

The political camps today are as divided as they were 60 years ago. Today, depending on your political affiliation, one is considered either "pro-resident" or "pro-business." Today's council is considered pro-resident.

Sixty years ago when the city was in the midst of the hotly contested debate whether to approve the first zoning ordinance, one was either an "anti-zoner" or a "pro-zoner."

IN THE early days of 1924 the Carmel City Planning Commission proposed the zoning ordinance as a method to improve the town through controls on business.

Many of the more vocal businessmen in town denounce the ordinances as too strict, especially in the areas of zoning boundaries and controls on so-called 'tourist-oriented' businesses.

The key provisions were restrictions on business locations and on the increase in motels.

And, in conjunction with the referendum on the zoning ordinance, the townsfolk were to vote on candidates to the board of trustess, now called the city council.

The candidates were divided among those who supported the ordinance and those opposed. Sound familiar?

The different factions in town were evenly divided. Some business people embraced the idea because it would create a central core for commercial enterprise.

Merchants who supported the zoning ordinance also believed that it would encourage residential growth. The more residents, the more business, they reasoned.

However, the ordinance also had its detractors. Businesses that catered to tourists were alarmed by the controls on motels and the restrictions on where they were allowed to open their shop doors.

The even division among the pioneer residents was evident in the results of the Monday, April 14, 1924 vote: 233 to 231 against the zoning code. The pro-zoners also were able to elect only one of their candidates.

Today, the "pro-zoners," or "pro-residents," are in power as the council tackles the modern day version of that hotly contested 1924 zoning ordinance.

It is interesting to note that many of the arguments presented by the premiere 1924 "pro-zoner" — the late Perry Newberry — are still echoed by the 1984 "pro-resident" city council.

Newberry, early day mayor, Pine Cone editor and author of many books, saw the zoning code as a tool to ensure the residential character of Carmel forever.

"The zoning ordinance is your insurance that the dwelling house you have built, or intend to build, will never be smothered by hotel, apartment, bungalow court or tenement; or by neighborhood store or factory," Newberry wrote in a front page Pine Cone story dated Feb. 9, 1924.

"The zoning ordinance is your guarantee of a free beach from Pescadero Canyon to Cook's Cove, unspoiled by concessions, unhampered by the front yards of motels, or the courts of crowded apartments," he wrote.

THERE ARE fears today that Carmel has or will become another Santa Cruz or Malibu.

Those fears were expressed by Newberry 60 years ago, especially when writing about Carmel Beach.

"If you know any of the fast-growing beach cities of California you can comprehend the value of this promise made into law.

"The beach belongs, not to the transient hotel guests, not to the excitement lovers, the merry-go-rounders, the hot dog peddlers, but to the residents of Carmel," he said.

In a separate article, Newberry wrote words that precede but coincide with Mayor Townsend's statements that merchants only see "dollar signs" in front of their eyes.

Newberry wrote that the zoning code "injures them (businessmen) only in their dream profits, their speculative returns, based on selfishness and carelessness for Carmel's future."

Other residents of that time supported Newberry's stance.

In a letter to the Pine Cone editor, one group asserted that the zoning code would save the town from commercial exploitation.

"It will help to build up a desirable domestic city instead of one purely commercial. It will not hamper growth, but will direct it in such a way that, in the end, there will remain the maximum beauty of the most enthralling city sites in the world."

But not all columnists in the Pine Cone embraced the zoning code proposal.

C.O. Goold wrote that the zoning code was a "joke" because it was not enforceable and did not carry out its original intentions when the city planning commission first approved it.

"Bad zoning is worse than none," he concluded.

Citizens form group to change and improve Youth Center

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A GROUP of concerned citizens has banded together under the name of "Concerned Parents and Friends of Carmel Youth" in an attempt to make some changes at the Carmel Youth Center.

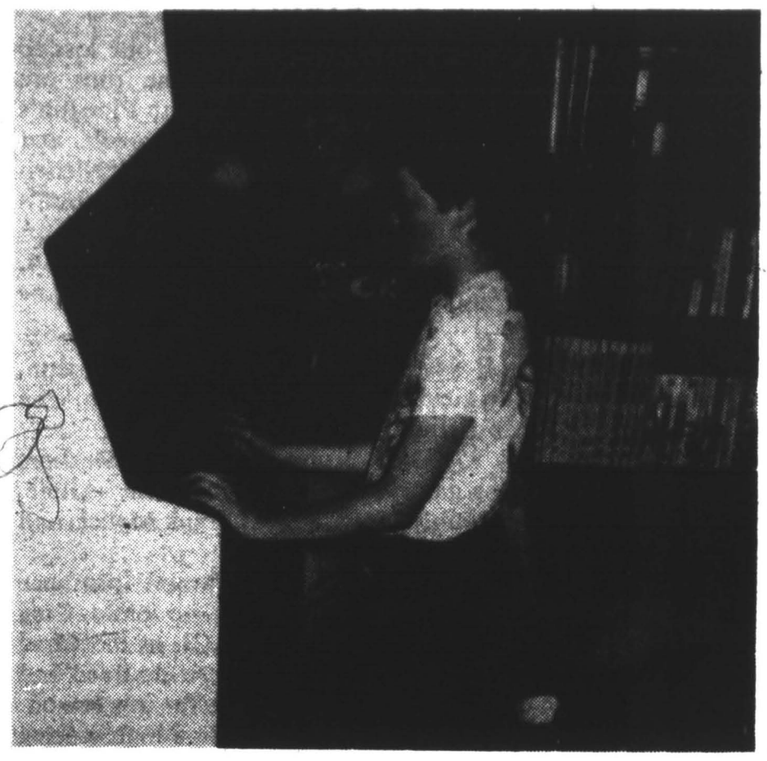
The committee has voiced several concerns about the operation of the youth center, membership on the board of directors and the apparent imbalance in spending on salaries and programs.

Committee members — who represent local schools, parents and the Carmel Youth Baseball board — met with the board of directors June 6 to talk about their concerns and how to offer more programs at the youth center.

Youth center directors are to discuss a committee request for changes in the board membership and by-laws when they meet at 5 p.m., June 20 at the center, southwest corner of Fourth Avenue and Torres Street.

Committee members have asked that all interested parents and citizens attend that meeting to let directors know there is a need for increased programs and representation on the board.

'It is apparent that an entire generation of young people have missed the wonderful experience of activities in this special meeting, which was created to support them.'



A COMMITTEE of parents and school officials have banded together in hopes of working with the Carmel Youth Center Board of Directors to offer more programs. Above, a couple of youth center participants played the video games. (Michael Gardner photo.)

"We are a group of concerned parents and friends of Carmel Youth who are distressed over the direction of the Carmel Youth Center, the approximately 20-member committee wrote in a letter to the board that was provided to the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

"We are well aware of the potential of this facility; many of us were once active members," the committee wrote.

"It is apparent that an entire generation of young people have missed the wonderful experience of activities in this special setting, which was created to support them," the letter continued.

The committee expressed displeasure over the recent board decision to hire Phil Cherry to replace longtime paid supervisor Jack Giles, who recently retired after more than 30 years with the center. Cherry was Giles' assistant.

"We are quite hesitant over the qualifications of the newly-chosen director," the letter stated. "His background and expreience in recreation, leadership, fund-raising, management and program development appear inadequate to us."

Several committee members said there were more qualified applicants. One unsuccessful applicant had a degree in accounting and a master's degree in recreation.

THE COMMITTEE also has questioned why the board has hired attorney Teresa Tersol for $1,000 to help Cherry in the transition stage.

Ms. Tersol is the daughter of board director Peter Tersol. He also is the paid accountant for the youth center.

That is another concern raised by the committee.

The board has budgeted $4,800 annually for the accountant, Tersol. However, the board only budgeted $4,200 for programs, according to the committee.

The committee questions why the board is paying more in staff salaries than what it spends on programs at the youth center. For example, Cherry is paid $1,500 monthly.

"We are bewildered over the amount allocated for activities and programs in that it appears to be disproportionately small in comparison to the to the total amount actually spent.

The committee also has asked directors to appoint a broader membership to the board.

Concerns about inactivity at the youth center prompted the Carmel City Council to meet with the board during a tour of the facility last year.

The council was assured that more activities would be offered and that many parents have begun to express a renewed interest in the center.

The Carmel Youth Center is a non-propfit organization that has been in operation for more than three decades. It owns the building, but leases the land from the city of Carmel for $1 per year. The lease expires in 1989.

Members of the "Concerned Parents and Friends of Carmel Youth" include Jerry and Karen Pullen, Ron and Susie Faia, Joyce and Gus Underdown, Jean and Ken White, Clyde and Pam Klaumann, and Larry and Phyllis Dufur.

Also Jim and Lou Langley, Harriett Rowntree, Kim Campbell, Bobby Winton, Gloria Wescott, Patty Cox, Judy Lewis, Linda Perkins, Barbara Harrison, Carol Woodson, and Anne Roberts.

Some of the school officials on the committee include Susan Bromfield, trustee of the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education; Marsha Kading-Kelly, principal of Carmel High School; and Frank Lynch, principal of Carmel Middle School.

They all signed the letter to the Carmel Youth Center Board of Directors.

Planning commission to consider condos

A proposal for a seven-unit condominium project on Junipero Avenue is to be reviewed by the Carmel Planning Commission when it meets at 4 p.m. June 20 at city hall.

Applicant Joe McEldowney wants to construct the two-story complex of two and three bedroom units on his 8,000 sq. ft. property on the west side of Junipero Avenue between Fourth and Fifth avenues.

McEldowney plans to donate the yellow house on the lot to the Carmel Heritage Society if the city approves the condominium project.

The Heritage Society wants to find a donated lot for the house and open a museum.

The approximately 75-year-old house now is used as the headquarters for Freeze Voter '84.

McEldowney also will have to obtain subdivision approval from the board of adjustments. The planning commission also sits as the board of adjustments to review specific applications.

A film entitled Greater Than Gold will be shown at 6 p.m. Sunday, June 17 at the First Baptist Church, Carmel, located on Carmel Valley Road at Schulte Road.

Evangelical Films presents a motion picture of a family torn by the pressures of a busy father, the crisis of a pregnant teenage daughter, and the lack of communication that threatens the life of their family.

Greater Than Gold is a film that speaks out boldly about standing firm for our faith, about the consequences of premarital sex, and on the sanctity of life.

Greater Than Gold is a film which reminds us that the proof of our faith is "greater than gold" (1 Peter 1:7).

Carmel Youth Baseball teams battle it out

IN SHE GOES! Patty Cox, player agent for Carmel Youth Baseball, took the plunge often as she good naturedly volunteered to be the "dunkee" in the dunk booth. It was all for a good cause, though, as hundreds of youth baseball supporters invaded the Rio Road field Sunday, June 10 for a day of games, contests and food. The "Fun Day" was a fund-raiser for the youth baseball program. (Photos by Holly McFarland.)

By DOROTHY MEHEEN

IN THE Mustang Division of Carmel Youth Baseball, Carmel Insurance leads with no losses. Following close behind, however, is Orange Julius with only one loss, plus a tie with CI last Saturday 8-8.

Bronco play finds La Playa leading with only one loss to Nielsen Bros. Market, in second place. Home runs are becoming a common sight on the Bronco field, with Pine Inn's Russell Peavey leading the way with two to his credit, and Derek Rayne's Will Griffith and Jason Vogelpohl; Nielsen Bros. Market's Scott Smith, and Carmel Valley Disposal's Paul Russell, all with one each.

Orange Julius defeated County Mounties 12-6 on May 14, with Willie Moore pitching the win. Willie also made a home run for O.J.

In spite of the win, it was a bad day for OJ's Zack Joseph, who sacrificed a tooth fielding a bad hop grounder to keep Brian Kingsley's hit to a single.

On Thursday, May 17, Dick Bruhn tied Carmel Realtors 17-17, in a very exciting game. CR's Cho Prasert hit a triple, while Zach Herington doubled for CR, and Frank Melicia and Parsegh Oksayan both doubled for DB.

The next day, Carmel Realtors fell to Carmel Insurance 14-10 to give CI the perfect record of six wins, no losses. Greg Jackson was winning pitcher and tripled for CI, as did Chad Christensen, who also went 3-3. Steve Biliouris doubled and went 3-3. Raine Padgham leads CI in walks so far this season.

On May 19, Books, Inc. beat Dick Bruhn in a high scoring game for them of 13-3, including a home run hit over the fence by Travis Smith. Other big hitters for Books included Mark Brophy, with a triple, Jon Bohlman with a double, and Clyde Berquist.

On Wednesday, May 30, County Mounties ran over Carmel Realtors with a whopping victory of 21-9. Daniel Higgens not only pitched the win, but also came up with a home run and made two spectacular infield plays for the mounties, while CM's Kevin Quinn both tripled and doubled.

Last Saturday, Orange Julius defeated Carmel Realtors 19-4, with Grant Heinrich pitching the win. Doubles for OJ were made by Mike Pauly and Bill Ramos, with Bill and Ryan Von Ruben leading hitters for OJ. Doubles for CR were made by Mike Zury and Bill Winslow.

On the Bronco field, Derek Rayne had a big victory over Carmel Valley Disposal 28-1. Danny Kleinbardt was pitcher of record and also doubled, as did Aaron Bliesner, Jason Vogelpohl and Will Griffith, all for DR, and Ben Jones doubled for CVD. Short stop Braulio DeAnda made an unassisted double play for CVD when he caught a fly ball and put a runner out on second.

On May 15, Pine Inn squeezed past Sierra Motor Coach 6-5. Robbie Takigawa was winning pitcher, Bryan Langley was leading hitter, and Aaron Anderson's base hit brought in the winning run. Alex Ramos doubled for SMC. SMC made four double plays during the game.

THE FOLLOWING Thursday, Nielsen Bros. Market defeated Sierra Motor Coach 21-5 with Scott Smith pitching the win. Devin Meheen and Jeff Norlock both tripled for NM, while Mike Parrish, Scott Gill, Scott Smith, and Benno Weiner all doubled. Leading hitters for NM were Mike Parrish, Scott Gill, Scott Smith, Devin Meheen, and Jeff Norlock. Alex Ramos doubled for SMC.

Sierra Motor Coach was again defeated the next day, this time by La Playa, 13-1. Rick Prieto pitched the win and doubled for LP, while his brother Chris doubled and went 2-3. Other hitters for LP were Aram Stoney and Kevin Winton, who both doubled, Kaleb Stevens with a 3-3, and Jim Witherall with a 2-3. Alex Ramos and Jon Shoemaker both doubled for SMC.

On May 19, Pine Inn lost to Derek Rayne 6-2. Jason Vogelpohl was winning pitcher and was DR's lead hitter with a double and going 3-3. Aaron Anderson doubled for PI.

Later that day, Nielsen Market defeated Carmel Valley Disposal 8-5 with Scott Smith the winning pitcher and leading hitter, which included a double. Doubles for CVD were made by Scott Allen and Paul Russell.

On May 30, Nielsen Bros. Market was again the winner over this time the previously unbeaten La Playa, who fell 8-4. Scott Gill pitched the win and doubled for NM while Chris Prieto was LP's leading hitter. Kaleb Stevens robbed Devin Meheen of a hit by a sensational driving catch from second base.

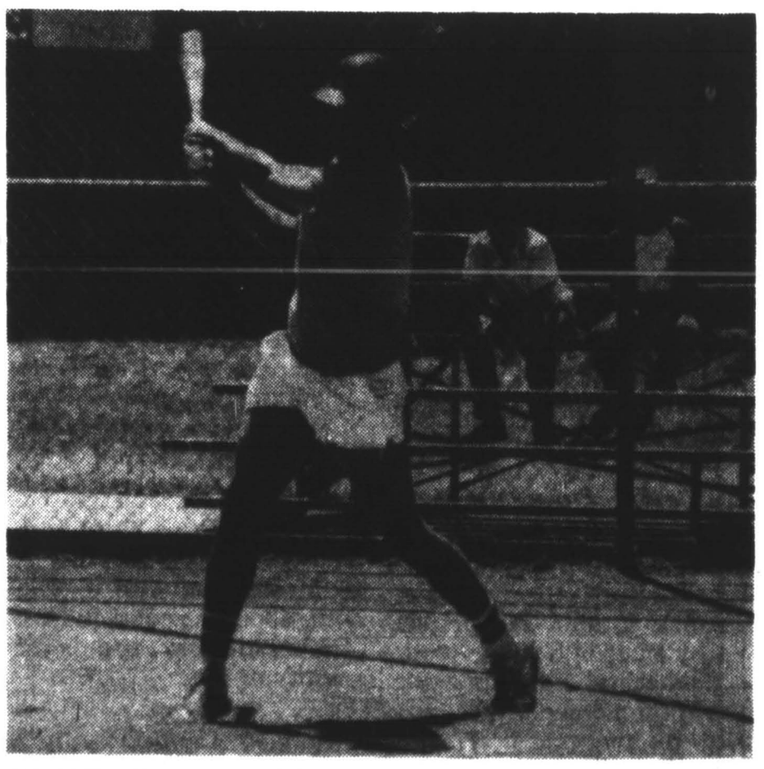
The next day, Sierra Motor Coach lost to Derek Rayne 14-1, with Danny Kleinbardt winning pitcher. The crowds stood in awe as Will Griffith and Jason Vogelpohl both parked the ball over the fence in the same inning for DR.

What do artichokes have to do with baseball? Well, a few nights ago, Scott Smith was frantically trying to open a giant jar of artichokes and told his friend and teammate, Devin, that if he could open the jar for him, Scott would park the ball at their next game. Devin succeeded, and sure enough so did Scott, right over the left field fence with two runners on when Nielsen Bros. Market met Derek Rayne last Saturday 13-3.

Scott also pitched the win. Scott Gill doubled, and Benno Weiner, Scott Gill, and Mike Parrish all went 2-4. Will Griffith was DR's leading hitter, and DR's Andy Rotharmel made catch at short shop to rob Jeff Norlock of a hard hit.

In major league softball play, Fouratt defeated Cal Acoustics 16-6 on May 14. Hallie Levy pitched the win. Elvina Scott doubled and went 2-3, Nancy Rubin went 3-3, Jessica Jacinto 2-4, and Jennifer Griffon 2-3.

On May 19, Fouratt fell to Monterey Dental 21-5. Ty Saxby was winning pitcher. Tiffany Anderson and Valerie Wester both tripled for MDG and Erica Stewart doubled. Leading hitters for MDG were Ty Saxby, Trece Binford, Valerie Wester and Erica Stewart, while Hallie Levy and Tiffany Morton lead in hitting for Fouratt.



A MIGHTY swing by Pine Inn coach John Lucido produced a long drive in the home run derby contest during a "Fun Day" fund-raiser for Carmel Youth Baseball held Sunday, June 10 on the Rio Road baseball field.

CONSCIENCE OF CARMEL

BY GUNNAR NORBERG

How to stop the freeway

IN LESS than two weeks, the board of supervisors is due to resume its consideration of the still-to-be-approved Carmel Valley Master Plan. The resumed discussion is scheduled for 2 p.m. Tuesday, June 26 and it's probably going to last a long time.

Many changes — some trifling, some significant — will be discussed, though some of critical importance may get too little attention. One very important change proposed by the city of Carmel, and carried by me to the board's May 15 public hearing, should get far more board attention than it did when I read it into the record of that day's hearing.

The city of Carmel took exception to what it considered the short shrift, or "brush off," the county gave to the city's desire to see that limiting environmental restraints would compel periodic evaluation of the master plan. I can only hope that county supervisors will give serious second thought to the intent of the city of Carmel proposal and include it in the master plan before final approval.

I refer specifically to another part of the master plan — the one which concerns the Hatton Canyon Freeway idea and the one I believe needs to be changed.

Instead of saying as it does now (on page 23 of the plan) that "Every effort should be made to obtain funding and proceed with construction of the Hatton Canyon Parkway" (which is a misnomer; it would actually be a freeway), I proposed, in written comments submitted to the board, that the following new wording be substituted:

"Appropriate consideration will be given to the question of whether or if, a Hatton Canyon Freeway should or should not be constructed after the required environmental impact statement, now under preparation, has been finally completed. Since it is now expected that this EIS will not be completed until sometime in 1985, further consideration of a Hatton Canyon Freeway project should be deferred to suitable future dates or times."

Since it is still likely that the CalTrans environmental impact statement will not be completed until some time next year, there is still time for second thoughts to prevail and to defer or terminate the Hatton Canyon desecration. There is every good reason to change the language in the draft master plan, in the way I have just proposed.

Already members of the Carmel City Council are beginning to have second thoughts about an approval of a Hatton Canyon project which it was persuaded to give. Meanwhile, the council had decided to wait until the state EIS is presented, presumably in 1985, before taking any further action.

MEANWHILE, there has been a suggestion made that it was only during the time when I was mayor that the Carmel City Council ever took a stand against the Hatton Canyon project. And that is not true.

Not only did it take a stand against the specifically proposed Hatton Canyon monstrosity which was considered in 1966 (when I was not mayor and when I was all too often on the short end of 4-1 votes), but it took the stand unanimously. Furthermore, in the 1966 resolution which was addressed to the state legislature, the Carmel City Council sought the termination of any thought of freeway construction south of the Carpenter Street/Highway 1 intersection.

In its 1966 resolution, the city council asked the legislature to delete from the state Streets and Highways Code the legal authority under which CalTrans is permitted to consider any freeway project, such as the Hatton Canyon, anywhere in the Carmel related areas south of Carpenter Street (which is where the existing freeway construction had already stopped in 1966).

Back in 1966, before then, and today, the south end of freeway authority ended, and still ends, at what is called "Carmel." But, many years ago, it was decided in Sacramento that "Carmel" wasn't anywhere inside of the city limits, but that it was instead "two tenths of a mile south of the Carmel River on State Highway 1." That definition would permit freeway construction to continue to that point, somewhere along the Odello artichoke fields south of the river.

So, in its 1966 resolution and again in its 1978 resolution, the Carmel City Council asked the legislature to delete "Carmel" and to substitute for it these words: "200 feet south of the Pacific Grove-Pebble Beach Interchange" which is just north of the Carpenter Street intersection.

If the state legislature had simply done in 1966 or in 1978 what a unanimous Carmel City Council had in each case asked it to do, there would not have been any authority left to build huge freeway interchanges either at Carpenter Street or at the Carmel Valley Road, or to make huge cuts and fills and to line the Hatton Canyon with freeway concrete. But the state legislature failed to act.

HOWEVER, first the Division of Highways and now CalTrans — along with the State Transportation Commission — have been eventually responsive to intense and earnest and dedicated local opposition to any imminent or threatened bulldozing down of the sylvan Hatton Canyon for the banal purpose of moving more cars and trucks to more motels and hotels and tourist-related enterprises. And so, up to now, the Hatton Canyon is still unspoiled, and with enough effort by those who are it could once again be saved.

However I believe that it would — in the long run — be only through the establishment here of what was described in a supplement to the March 4, 1971 issue of the Carmel Pine Cone as the Norberg Plan for a Heritage City, or some other such plan, that not only the Hatton Canyon but also all the other Carmel-related areas up the Carmel Valley and down the coast to and through Big Sur could be saved from destruction.

Under this plan, all these treasured local areas could be given special status and special protection by the state government, and they could then become the first human sanctuary in the state and perhaps the whole country.

Meanwhile we can look forward to a new supervisor in this Fifth District of Monterey County after the coming November elections, and we have good reason to believe that either Howard Brunn or Karin Strasser Kauffman would bring new understanding and new vision to the task of truly representing the cares and concerns of the voters who will place one or the other on the board of supervisors next January.

BUSINESS BEAT
BY FLORENCE MASON

Changes on business scene

CHANGE is definitely in the wind for Robert and Ruth Ann Carlisle of Poindexter Properties. One of their local businesses — Winters West — has a new name and a new emphasis, while another — Winters Gallery — has a new name and plans for expansion.

Winters West at Ocean Avenue and Monte Verde Street is now Reflections, and instead of being an art gallery, it will be a men's and women's boutique which features European clothes. Carlisle described this change as "a higher and better use of the property, since we have a main gallery only a couple of blocks away."

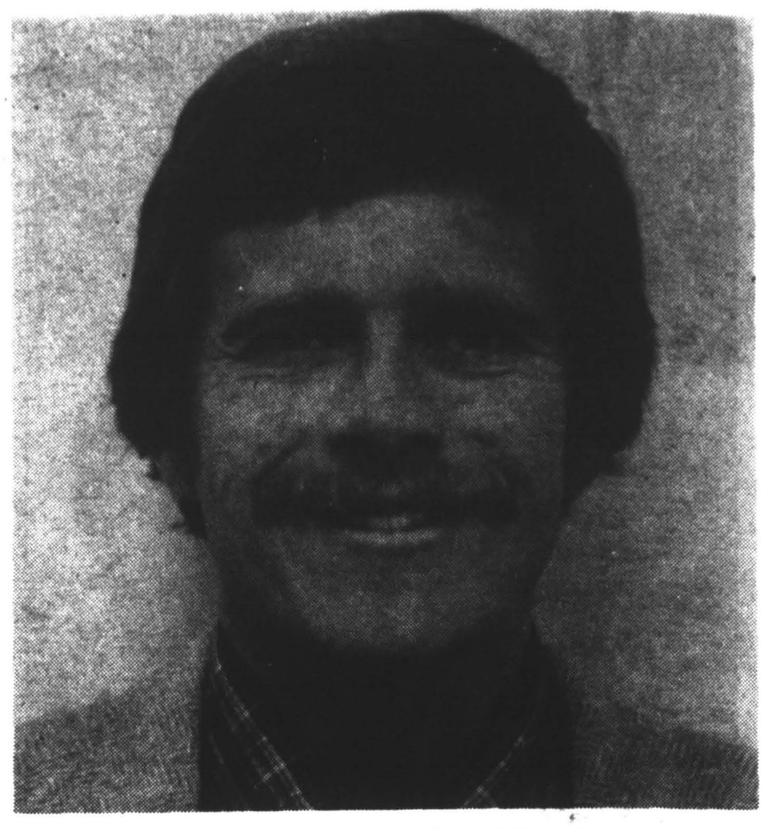
He accepted Assistant Planning Director Diane White's comment that if fine art is still shown, the new license requires that it be decorative only and not for sale. The new use is actually an old one, since it was an apparel store before Joan and Jerry Winters acquired it and developed an art gallery there.

The Winters' name came up again when the Carlisles' application for a name change for Winters Gallery on Dolores Street was approved by the business license board. Carlisle told the board that when he and his wife bought the gallery from Joan and Jerry Winters, the Winterses had not been living and working here.

"Now they are back, and we don't want to exploit their name. Also, we are going to expand and open a gallery in Dallas, so we want a name that can have broader application," he said. So Gateway Gallery it now is.

HAMMERSMITH

"I'm delighted that you found another name for jewelry," said Sandy Swain, chairwoman of the Carmel Planning Commission, at a recent meeting of the business license board. Her remark was addressed to Donald and Judith Baird, who petitioned the board for permission to change the name of their Carmel business from Leatherhead to George Baird, Hammersmith.



HANK ARMSTRONG will handle public relations for the new Monterey Bay Aquarium.

Baird explained that he no longer does as much leatherwork, and the new name would reflect his chief interest: making forged jewelry of silver, brass, copper and bronze. "I'm a trained metalsmith," he said, and added that he had worked with Alex Wygers in Carmel Valley and done some blacksmithing with him.

"I make about 90 percent of the merchandise myself," he said, "and the rest is made by a couple of friends. It's all handwrought, one at a time."

Judith Baird said the old name, Leatherhead, might be misleading now. She works in the Dolores Street shop six days each week. Baird still makes leather belts and buckles, but injuries to his wrist, as well as his own "likes and dislikes," have led to concentration on metalwork.

Baird explained that the term "hammersmith" connotes a home industry. "Hammersmiths broke away from the jewelry business in England, historically," he told attentive members of the license board. "My work is in a broader range than jewelry and I don't want to be known as a jeweler now."

ROUND-UP IN THE VALLEY

Local residents and visitors who used to travel to Salinas to dine at Smalley's Round-Up can now take a shorter journey — to the Valley Hills Shopping Center in Carmel Valley. Earlier this week, Dave Smalley opened a second restaurant, in the space formerly occupied by Woolly Goldfield's. "It's an ideal site," Dave said to describe his new "family owned and operated" restaurant.

The Round-Up specializes in steaks and ribs pit-cooked over oakwood, with a "secret" barbecue sauce known only to members of the immediate family. Dave himself assumes full responsibility for the selection and cutting of meats, preparation of that special sauce, preparation of the chili beans, and training and supervision of cooks. Diane Smalley will maintain the records for both restaurants, administer employee benefits and prepare payroll checks.

There are two other co-owners: Michael and Charlotte Grubbs. Michael is a metallurgical engineer who designed and started two multi-million dollar recycling facilities for Raytheon, where he is engineering manager. Charlotte Grubbs knows the practical side of business after having worked as a cosmetologist and as a travel agent. Now she plans to complete a college degree in business while she works part time.

The decision to open a second restaurant, this one in Carmel Valley, was based on Dave Smalley's estimate that more than 30 percent of the guests at the Salinas Round-Up live in the Monterey-Carmel area. It also helped, he said, that the facility he bought came complete with all the required furnishings.

"Our only expenditure will be the initial inventory of drygoods and food items," he said. He also mentioned that the Chamber of Commerce estimates that more than 10,000 automobiles pass by the restaurant each day on Carmel Valley Road.

Smalley sees his new customers as being "more sophisticated." Because of this, he will expand his wine list from seven to 15 different wines. And the price of most menu entree items has been increased above that of the Salinas restaurant by about $1, to offset higher overhead costs. "But we are still offering an honest value in quality, quantity and pricing," Dave said.

ONWARD AND UPWARD

Tom Oliver hardly had time to get used to one new hat, as vice president of Pebble Beach Co., before he put it down and picked up another, president of the company.

Both moves followed the resignation of Harry Holmes, who had been president since 1975. At the time of Holmes' resignation, Oliver was named executive vice president and assumed Holmes' responsibilities. Ten days later, he was named president.

Oliver went to work for the Pebble Beach Co. 18 years ago, during the time of Samuel Morse, the company founder. For 10 years he was vice president of the resort and recreation division, which included direct responsibility for the daily operations of the Lodge at Pebble Beach, three golf courses, the Beach and Tennis club and other company properties. He was also responsible for the real estate division and the company wholly-owned subsidiary, Del Monte Realty Co.

He has lived on the Monterey Peninsula 25 years. He had prior experience at the Carmel Valley Inn, the Grand Hotel de la Paix in Nice and the London Ritz. He has a graduate degree from the Westminster Hotel School in London.

Oliver takes over as president at a time when the company plans a major refurbishing of the Lodge's public space and dining facilities. He and his wife, Margaret, were born in England and came to the United States in 1959. They live in Pebble Beach and have two adult sons, Mark, 20, and David, 23.

PUBLICIZING THE "CRITTERS"

Seen dining at Carmel's Forge in the Forest last week: Hank Armstrong, newly named to the position of public relations manager for the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

Armstrong said he joined the aquarium staff because "it sounded like something I always wanted to be involved with." He grew up on the California coast and is a surfer and diver. His most recent experience has been in Sacramento, where he owned a freelance copywriting firm. Also, he was editor-in-chief of Sacramento magazine for two years and is the author of a book, Great and Notorious Saloons of San Francisco.

Now he will turn his attention to the aquarium and its "critters," as the staff likes to call the various inhabitants of the exhibits which are now taking shape. The formal opening of the aquarium, which is on the borders of Monterey and Pacific Grove, is scheduled for Oct. 20.

Armstrong joins a rapidly expanding permanent staff which is expected to top 100 by the time the seven-year, $40 million project opens its doors. In addition, a class of 300 aquarium guides has just completed its intensive 15-week course on marine biology. The guides, many of whom are Carmel residents, will staff the various exhibits, conduct tours and provide educational programs in the community.

"CURVED BRISTLES MAKE SENSE"

SPIRULINA: THE FOOD OF THE FUTURE IS HERE NOW.
Spirulina Plankton is the most basic substance in the whole food chain... Spirulina's high-quality protein contains 18 of 22 amino acids required for health — and all eight essential amino acids in the correct proportion. Protein such as this is rarely found in non-animal sources, so Spirulina is popular with vegetarians. And Spirulina's protein, which provides sustaining energy to the human body, is up to 95 percent, digestible as compared with beef's 20 percent. Several kinds of unusual proteins called biliproteins which occur naturally in our own bodies are found in Spirulina. Spirulina is low in calories, fats and sodium and amazingly high in efficient proteins (containing 60 to 71 percent) and all the cell salts and enzymes for body metabolism.

At a brief gathering of Christian Scientists in Boston June 4, church officers spoke of the critical need for "works over words" in the closing years of the 20th Century.

Incoming chairman of the Christian Science Board of Directors, H. Dickinson Rathbun, invited church members to consider ways in which the deeper message of the Bible could be more widely felt.

"Without any doubt," Rathbun said, the best "advertisement" is to "demonstrate in our lives the Christ" which Jesus so fully taught and lived.

The gathering focused on what Christian Scientists term their "pastor," the Bible and the Christian Science textbook. Speakers emphasized the role of this textbook — Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, by the church's founder, Mary Baker Eddy — in "unlocking Bible treasures" in somewhat the same manner as a deeply inspired sermon.

The awakening interest in Biblical healing was also noted as a significant "sign of the times." Reports from the treasurer, clerk, and church committees were included in the meeting.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

For more and more older Americans, ballroom dancing has become a favorite type of recreation. Not only is it a healthful form of exercise, but it's also a way to meet new friends and a great reason to dress up. That was the view expressed by dance teacher Arthur Murray on his 89th birthday. When the famed Russ Morgan Orchestra celebrated its 45th anniversary last year at the Val-Air Ballroom in Iowa, dancers from 23 states, most of them senior citizens, came to whirl around the dance floor. How long has it been since you've "cut a rug" with your partner?

America's seniors can be proud of the political power they've achieved in recent years and even prouder of the fact that their clout comes not so much from expensive lobbying efforts as from the fact that they are the nation's best voters. In the 1982 election, twice the percentage of 55 to 64-year-olds voted as compared with 21 to 24-year-olds. The best record of all was set by the 65-74 age group, 64.8 percent of whom went to the polls.

Remember When? 1951—Do you recall the most popular films of that year? "An American in Paris" won the Oscar for best picture. Vivien Leigh was voted best actress for "A Streetcar Named Desire" and Humphrey Bogart won best actor for "The African Queen."

CATCHING the curl at Carmel Beach, this surfer prepares for the fifth Surfabout competition, which will showcase a variety of surfing styles in a competitive format Saturday and Sunday, June 16-17.

Carmel Beach plays host to fifth annual Surfabout

By ANNE PAPINEAU

HIGH ENERGY, free form competitive surfing returns to Carmel Beach this weekend, June 16-17, as the Fifth Annual Sunshine Freestyle/Gotcha Beachwear Surfabout takes to the waves.

The competition is open to Monterey County residents only, but spectators from beyond the county line who don't know skimboards from boogieboards people the beach.

Surfabout observers are requested to park away from Scenic Road to keep traffic running smoothly. To minimize erosion along the banks of Carmel Beach, the city of Carmel requests that existing stairways be used. There is a $500 fine for standing on the unprotected banks.

Competition is set to begin at 6:30 a.m. Saturday with junior boogieboard competition, open to ages 17 and under. In all levels of competition, surfers' heats will last 15 minutes. Each wave ridden will be judged on a scale of one to 10 by each of the five judges. At the end of the heat, the best five waves of each surfer will be combined to obtain individual total scores.

Points are given based on style, wave positioning, number of maneuvers and overal performance on each wave.

Senior boogieboard, open to all age groups, begins at 7:30 a.m. Saturday. A boogieboard is a soft-structured board that enthusiasts ride lying on their stomachs.

Surfing competitions start at 8:30 a.m. Saturday with junior surfing (ages 15 to 17). Men's surfing (ages 18 to 24) begins at 9:30 a.m. and master's surfing (ages 25 to 35) at noon Saturday.

Boys (ages 12 to 14) take to the boards at 2 p.m., to be followed at 3 p.m. with women's

Peruse precious possessions at antiques show and sale

BIBELOTS, objects d'art and other collectibles distinguish the 10th Annual Monterey County Antiques Show and Sale.

Scheduled Friday through Sunday, June 15-17 at the Monterey County Fairgrounds, the event is a benefit for the Monterey County Unit of United Voluntary Services.

Proceeds from the traditional spring show and sale will be used to support local charitable programs served by United Voluntary Services.

Thousands of antiques valued at millions of dollars will be available in a wide price range. More than 50 antiques exhibitors from the western United States will sponsor booths at the weekend sale. The show is under the direction of antiques authority Walter Larsen.

Show offerings will include heirloom gold and silver, estate jewelry, country and period furniture, American Brilliant Period cut glass, bronzes, porcelains, Orientalia, rare prints and maps, paintings, heirloom quilts and linens, Art Deco, American Art Nouveau, American primitives and folk art, art glass and pottery, matching sterling silver services, Georgian and Victorian jewelry, books, clocks, Meissen, pewter, Tiffany, Wedgewood, Worcester, ivories, jade, dolls, antique toys, paper collectibles and more.

Donna Zoller of Pebble Beach is current president of the Monterey County Unit of UVS that sponsors the antiques show.

Committee leaders who contributed to the 1984 show and sale include Lee Alcott of Carmel; Marcia Juergens of Carmel Valley; Gail Compton and Eleanor Ernst of Monterey; Mary Ann Poletti of Pacific Grove; Margaret Peebles, Maurine Rhineshart, Jean Hanna, Marjorie Davis, Dorothy Shudoma and Jane Houghton, all of Pebble Beach.

Former heads of the Monterey County UVS Unit and still leading figures in these programs are Virginia Stanton of Carmel Valley, who served as charter president, and Kitty Ragsdale of Monterey, who preceded Mrs. Zoller as second president.

Organized more than three decades ago through the inspiration of golfer Helen Lengfeld, the UVS Monterey County Unit — one of many units throughout the nation — contributes hundreds of hours of voluntary service to community needs and projects for veterans, youth and members of the Armed Forces.

Walter Larsen, new director of the Monterey County Antiques Show and Sale, is ranked as one of the leading entrepreneurs of antiques shows in the West.

A native of the Midwest and longtime Californian, Larsen is a former college professor of psychology. More than 20 years ago he entered the antiques field full time.

Larsen regularly travels abroad to keep abreast of international developments in antiques. Following a European trip last year, Larsen reported: "When it comes to shopping for bargains in antiques, it's all here in America. American prices for antiques are five years behind continental prices, and American collectors traveling abroad are discovering that the real bargains are to be found right here at home."

"Even English antiques are more reasonable here than in England," he added.

Hours are noon to 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. Tickets, available at the door, are $2.75 and will be good for the entire three-day show. Tickets for senior citizens will be $1 on Friday only. Children will be admitted free when accompanied by an adult.

Events celebrate school turned cultural hub

Sunset Center 20th anniversary feted

TWO DECADES have passed since an elementary school on San Carlos Street named Sunset was sold to the city of Carmel and named its community and cultural center.

The diversity of events presented at Sunset Center today will be highlighted in a 20th anniversary celebration, to take place Thursday through Saturday, June 14-16.

The former classrooms and cafeteria that now serve as a cultural rallying point will resound with song, dance, drama and memory jogs through old Carmel.

All events are free. However, due to limited seating for certain programs, audience members are requested to obtain free tickets in advance to ensure admission. Tickets can be picked up at the director's office, Sunset Center, Eighth Avenue and San Carlos Street.

Be prepared for a kaleidoscope of activities, some of them scheduled at the same time. Sunset Center now plays host to an average 250 activities per month, according to its director of eight years, Richard Tyler. To reflect the broad menu of offerings at Sunset, anniversary activities will take place in the theater, Carpenter Hall, terrace and gallery, as well as rooms 10 and 15.

The celebration officially kicks off at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, June 14, with ceremonies at Sunset Theater, San Carlos Street at Ninth Avenue. "Beginning, Now, and Future" is the theme of the opener, to be attended by Carmel Mayor Charlotte Townsend, cultural commissioners and residents involved in the purchase of Sunset Center.

Children offered art instruction

CARMEL artist Paulla will lead two six-week creative art courses for young people ages seven through 10 and 11 through 13. The course is scheduled Wednesday mornings and begins at the Carmel Youth Center June 27. The course is based on the idea that art is not taught but is a creative expression inherent in every child. Two and three-dimensional media will be explored. There are no fees, but a $3 donation is requested to help defray the cost of supplies. To register, call the director of the Youth Center, Philip Cherry, 624-3285, between 3 p.m. and 5 p.m. or 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.

Screen writing techniques taught

An eight-week course in "Basic Screen and Television Writing Techniques" will be offered beginning June 19 at Monterey Peninsula College.

Taught by screenwriter Madeline DiMaggio, the class meets at 6:30 p.m. Tuesdays in the Social Science Building, room 202. The course is free, and registration should be completed in advance through the MPC Registration Office.

Telescope dedicated Saturday

DEDICATION ceremonies are scheduled at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 16 for the Monterey Institute for Research in Astronomy $800,000 observatory on Chew's Ridge, south of Carmel Valley.

Those who wish to attend should meet at 10 a.m. on Carmel Valley Road at the signs beyond Carmel Valley Village for car pooling.

Keynote speaker for the 11 a.m. dedication is John McTague, deputy director of science and technology in the executive office of President Ronald Reagan.

After the address, a picnic will take place at Carmel Valley Ranch, followed by a program and cake cutting at 2:30 p.m.

The specially constructed 36-inch telescope which forms the heart of the Oliver Observing Station on Chew's Ridge, on the edge of the Los Padres National Forest, was moved from its temporary site in Carmel Valley last week.

Most of the work of the observatory will be in the area of spectroscopy — to determine the composition of distant stars — and will be conducted with the aid of electronic devices, rather than through direct viewing.

The Chew's Ridge location was selected by the team of astronomers because it is removed from coastal fogs and from the smog and night lights of urban areas. Once in operation, the MIRA telescope will be as effective as the 200-inch telescope at Mount Palomar in Southern California, according to Cynthia Irvine, MIRA president.

The MIRA observatory has been privately planned, financed and constructed with no government assistance. It will be available to the public for selected viewing and field trips by special arrangement.

Please reserve now for your Father's Day Dinner 2-11 p.m.

FRANCES HORN, psychotherapist and author of I Want One Thing, will speak at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, June 14 at the Carl Cherry Foundation in Carmel. Topic of the discussion will be "I can make peace."

Author addresses world peace

By ANNE PAPINEAU

CARMEL AUTHOR Frances Horn, whose 1981 study in self-realization — I Want One Thing — is a staple on new age library shelves, now devotes her energies to achievement of world peace.

"Because of the nuclear weapons systems, we can't fight a war without committing suicide," Ms. Horn said. "I feel absolutely blessed and am very pleased to be in this place of natural beauty which I hope we won't spoil."

The former psychotherapist will speak at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, June 14, at the Carl Cherry Foundation, Guadalupe Street and Fourth Avenue, Carmel. Her topic will be "I can make peace."

Now 77, Ms. Horn devoted decades to an often painful search for personal fulfillment. "Outwardly I gave the impression of being self-confident, capable, popular, gifted — a 'born leader,' " she wrote in I Want One Thing. "Inwardly and unawarely I lived with a profound sense of inadequacy and low self-esteem.' "

Reared and educated in the San Francisco Bay Area, Ms. Horn first visited the Monterey Peninsula during a conference at Asilomar in 1928. In the following years she was to travel around the world, earning two masters degrees and a doctorate along the way. She counseled cancer patients and continued her personal journey toward fulfillment.

She described herself as "a short-order cook in a nudist park, and a dinner guest in the palace of the Maharajah of Mysore." The author was in fact for some years a devotee of nudist camps, but the beauty of the Monterey Peninsula attracted her to return and settle in Carmel in 1969.

"This is no place for a nudist camp — it's too cold," is her pragmatic observation.

The "one thing" referred to in the title of her book Ms. Horn describes as wanting "only for life to express itself. For example, in a relationship you'd be leaving the person free to be or to do. You'd love out of your fullness instead of your need."

This philosophy, she explained, "has more to do with being than doing."

"Who can say for sure what the meaning of anything is?" she asked. "I think to get beyond good and evil means to expand your view, to try to be as open and expanded in your ability to really see what's happening — because in the end what you're trying to do is consciously to co-create the next step in evolution."

As a lover of nature who shares her meals in view of Carmel Bay, Ms. Horn is deeply concerned about mankind's "next step in evolution." "What I'm emphasizing is an application of what's in the book to my life in the world."

These days the author travels the United States and Europe to lecture about what she views as "the oneness" of humankind. The object of her discussions is "getting beyond war."

"If you really believe it's a universe — not a duo-verse — a cosmic evolution is going on and our part is to express that oneness," she said. "It's getting beyond a sense of separation. Everything is interconnected."

For reservations and further information about this discussion, call the Carl Cherry Foundation at 624-7491.

Surfing competition this weekend in Carmel longboard competition. This event is open to women of all ages.

The distance paddle race is set to go off at 3:30 p.m. Saturday. This event is dedicated to Dick Cross, who died while surfing in Hawaii. An all-ages event, the race begins at Stewart's Cove at Carmel River State Beach, goes around Carmel Point and ends in front of the judge's stand on Carmel Beach.

The Saturday action continues with open longboard at 4:30 p.m. Longboards must be at least 2.5 feet over the surfer's head. This competition is dedicated to Scott Hamilton, a local surfer who died of cancer last winter.

Grand master's, men's quarter finals and master's quarter finals round out the action Saturday at 5:45, 6:30 and 7:30 p.m., respectively.

THE SCHEDULE is no less packed on Sunday. Open kneeboard heats begin at 6:30 a.m. Kneeboards, five-feet eight-inches in length or less, are employed in this all-age competition.

This event is the Lew Boren Memorial, dedicated to the man who died as a result of a shark attack while kneeboarding off Asilomar in 1981.

Boogieboard semi-finals and finals take up the time slot from 8 a.m. to 9:15 a.m.

Women's shortboards dominate at 9:30 a.m., with women's finals scheduled to start at 10 a.m. Longboard quarter- and semi-finals take place 10:30 to 11:45 a.m.

One of the most popular events for observers is the team paddle relay, which is scheduled to begin at noon Sunday. Each team consists of four members. One board is used for each team, and team members are staggered at different points down the beach.

At the sound of the horn, the first group runs down the beach and paddles through the surf and around a buoy floating just beyond the break. The paddler rounds the buoy and heads for the beach. Competitors may ride the waves or paddle in. The surfer then runs down the beach to the next group where he/she hands off to the next team member. The race continues until the last group crosses the finish line.

Catch the skimboard heats at 1:30 p.m., with skimboard finals set to start at 2:30 p.m. Open to all ages, the skimboard events employ beach-bound boards that competitors ride on the sand.

Longboard finals begin at 3 p.m.; junior semi-finals, 3:30 p.m.; junior finals, 4 p.m.; men's semi-finals, 4:15 p.m.; men's semi-finals, 5:15 p.m.; master's semi-finals, 5:45 p.m. and master's final, 6:30 p.m.

The topper arrives at 7 p.m. Sunday, when top finishers of each event compete in a super heat. The overall winner last year was Randy Paik of Carmel Valley.

A Surfabout dance is scheduled to begin at 9 p.m. Sunday at the Old Monterey Music Hall, 425 Washington St., Monterey. An awards ceremony is set for 10:30 p.m. Tickets are available only at Sunshine Freestyle Sports, 443 Lighthouse Ave., Monterey. Tickets will not be available at the door. For more information about Surfabout activities, call 375-5015.

Frohman Academy workshop set

Tuition for the six-week workshop, sponsored in part by the city of Carmel, is $75; $50 to residents of Carmel Unified School District. Registration deadline is June 22.

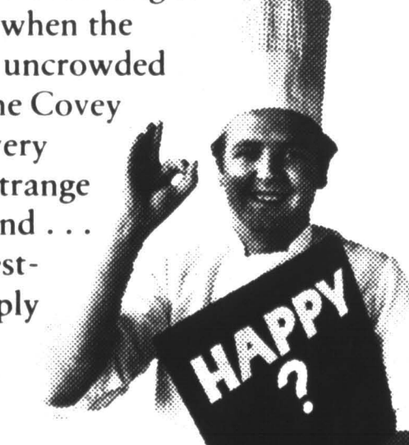
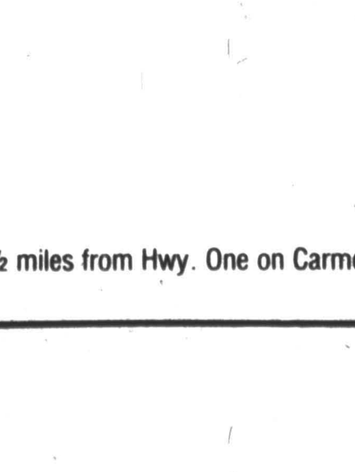
LIFE'S SPECIAL OCCASIONS



" . . . why do we always wait so long to find the right reason to do something nice — for others or ourselves? I spent years watching lovely people enjoy the gracious surroundings, the marvelous food and the unmatched service attention of the Covey Restaurant as a 'special occasion' treat to themselves or others. It made me wonder why so many would wait so long.



For all the birthdays, anniversaries, and holidays that we have as a part of our lives, not to mention the new babies, promotions and other events worth celebrating, it seems almost an exercise in denial to put off until tomorrow — what we all should be celebrating today.

That's what the Covey is all about — 'celebrating!' So take just a little tip from someone who has watched others enjoy themselves over the years. Enjoy fine dining at the Covey today, because 'Life's Special Occasions' are happening all the time. Don't wait too long to celebrate life when the comfortable, uncrowded elegance of the Covey awaits you every evening. As strange as it may sound . . . the Covey Restaurant is simply not worth waiting for!"

ROCK FORM and Surf — Point Lobos Reserve, is a 1974 work by Huntington Witherill. The Friends of Photography Gallery will show a group exhibition, Point Lobos: Place as Icon, which includes work by more than 40 historical and contemporary photographers.

Lensmen pay homage to magic of Point Lobos

'POINT LOBOS: Place as Icon," is the subject of a group exhibition to open Friday, June 15 at the Friends of Photography Gallery. The public is invited to attend the opening reception 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. Friday. The exhibit will remain on display through July 22.

Presented in conjunction with the 20th anniversary celebration of the establishment of Sunset Center as a community cultural center, as well as the 50th anniversary of the designation of Point Lobos as a California State Reserve, "Point Lobos: Place as Icon" includes work by more than 40 artists who have photographed the site during the last century.

Among the past residents of the Monterey Bay area whose work is included in the show are Ansel Adams, Wynn Bullock, C.W. Johnson and Edward Weston. Local photographers with work on display are Brett Weston, Morley Baer, Cole Weston, Richard Garrod, Huntington Witherill and Tom Millea.

In addition, a number of major photographic artists from other regions who have come to photograph Point Lobos will also be represented. These include Imogen Cunningham, who visited in 1920 and W. Eugene Smith, who was here in 1955, as well as contemporary artists Lucien Clergue and Jean Dieuzaide, both of France; and American photographers Paul Caponigro, Bea Nettles, Jerry Uelsmann and Don Worth.

Point Lobos plays a unique role as a mecca for photographers, and has provided a source of subject matter to artists for more than 100 years. Set along a relatively small expanse of the central California coast just south of Carmel, the present state reserve contains only 1,100 acres, with more than half of these an underwater marine preserve.

Nineteenth-century photographers visited the site on their travels through the western United States, and the visually rich forests and seashore of Point Lobos have received attention from a great number of artists in this century. The best-known of these is Edward Weston, who worked there intensively between 1929 and the early 1950s, but his was by no means the only vision to find expression there.

Normal gallery hours are 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

Zantman show highlights Chinese-born painter

THE PUBLIC is invited to meet artist Hu Chi Chung at the opening of an exhibit of his paintings 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, June 16 at the Zantman Art Galleries in Carmel. Cocktails and hors d'oeuvres will be served at the reception in the Sixth Avenue at Mission Street location of the Zantman Art Galleries.

This year marks the 13th anniversary of Chung's arrival in the United States and is his 11th one-man show in the Zantman Art Galleries.

The Chinese-born artist's familiar theme of galloping horses is represented, but in the new paintings greater emphasis is placed on the landscape. Especially in the larger paintings, sweeping vistas of rolling hills and valleys against majestic mountains are portrayed. The horses appear relatively small and are often seen in the distance, which conveys natural grandeur and infinite space.

Other notable paintings in the collection feature small birds perched on the branches of flowering trees, brilliantly colored carp swimming in sparkling pools, deer on remote verdant hills and bighorn sheep in their rugged habitats.

The colors in Hu Chi Chung's latest paintings are more varied and brilliant than in years past. The artist explains this, as well as the expanded scope of his paintings, by the strong impact of wildflower-carpeted meadows in the high Sierras. In this ruggedly dramatic country, he said he finds the tranquility and freedom that have such a strong influence on the paintings in this exhibition.

For additional information about this exhibit, call 624-8314.

CALIFORNIA SPRING, a recent painting by Chinese-born artist Hu Chi Chung, can be viewed at the Zantman Art Galleries. The artist will be present at a reception 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, June 16, at the Zantman Art Galleries, Sixth Avenue at Mission Street, Carmel.

Artist's work celebrates life

THE EXUBERANT oil paintings of Tom Huntington are a celebration of a life which, but for art, would have ended during the Carmel artist's 16th year.

In an interview in his sunny Carmel home, Huntington told how art saved his life.

Struck down by spinal meningitis in 1966, Huntington rapidly lost both speech and memory, and most of his sight.

"I thought I was a goner," he said. "The doctors told my parents the disease would hit my heart next, and I would die. But they wouldn't give up."

His parents knew that as a student at Robert Louis Stevenson School, his major interest was art. He first copied comics and then created his own cartoons. Unable to communicate with their dying son through either speech or writing (with loss of memory he lost his ability to read), his parents tried another avenue of reaching him. They brought him the felt pens he used for drawing.

"I didn't know who I was, where I was or what I was doing, but I began to draw," he said.

The doctors warned that if he lived, there was a strong likelihood that he would just be a "vegetable," but his parents took hope from his interest in drawing.

They next brought him family photographs in an attempt to break through his amnesia, and Huntington finally experienced the excitement of recognizing himself.

"I thought, 'that's me!', and I started coming back," he said.

But the mental slate was wiped clean: everything he had ever learned was gone. Special therapists were found to teach him. As an infant would, he had to learn to speak, to write and to read. Unfit for high school, he wandered the Carmel beaches sketching and painting. He was often questioned by truant officers at first and, still unable to speak, would show them a note written by his father which explained, "This is my son Tom Huntington, who is not in school because of his aphasic condition."

HUNTINGTON also haunted the galleries, marveled at the paintings and learned from them, as well as from meeting and talking with painters.

At age 20 he achieved his first art triumph by doing whimsical cartoon illustrations for a small history book, California: The Fabulous Island, still in print. And, in 1971, he enrolled in the Santa Barbara Art Institute as a sculpture major.

"I wanted to get away from cartooning into serious art," he explained. "And sculpture seemed to me as far away as I could get."

The few bronzes he has kept from that period retain the artist's sense of whimsy, but with a more mature approach than the boy's cartoons.

His passion for color and the textural qualities of oil paints gradually seduced him away from sculpture and, in 1975, he graduated from the institute as an oil painting major. His outstanding talent was acknowledged that same year by an invitation to exhibit in a major Santa Barbara art gallery.

Reviewing his work, the Santa Barbara News Press art critic wrote, "Huntington uses his delicious paint spectrum as if it came out of the tap ... decisive brush strokes melt together, creating a flowing, watery surface — dangerously alive with pigment."

Huntington's favorite painters are Klee, Gauguin and Picasso, a fact reflected in his whimsy, bright palette and inventiveness.

"There are two kinds of artists," Huntington commented, "those who can draw perfectly — and colorists. I think of color first, before form. I paint intuitively. The main reason I paint is because I want to see what the painting will look like, and I don't know until I've painted it. Like Picasso said, a painting shouldn't be settled out beforehand, but happen as you paint it."

In the years following that first show, Huntington was given solo shows in the Pacific Grove Art Center and the former San Carlos Gallery of Carmel, and was included in group shows in the M. Shore and Son Gallery in Santa Barbara and the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

To augment his income, but lacking either training or work experience, he worked as a sandblaster, a teacher's aide and an inventory clerk. He caught up on the years of education lost to amnesia by attending Monterey Peninsula College and earning an Associate of Arts degree in 1978.

An avid surfer, he surfs when he can, but he paints every day. As he paints, he listens to music. This may be classical, jazz, or tapes of himself playing his bongo drums.

"Art and music are distractions," he said. "Not an escape — but a release from trivial worries. You're in a bubble. I mean, there's no one saying, 'Will you sign this check now?' or such."

TOM HUNTINGTON works on a painting in his Carmel studio. The artist will be present at a solo show of his paintings and drawings entitled The Wild, Wonderful World of Tom Huntington, which opens 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, June 16 at Landell Galleries in Carmel. The show will remain open through July 15.

Non-traditional photography taught

The Monterey Peninsula College Photography Department will present a two-day workshop on non-traditional photography techniques. The workshop will be taught by Robert Dawson Saturday and Sunday, June 16-17.

Entitled "The Visual Techniques of Expression," the workshop will feature discussion and demonstrations of multiple exposure photography, the use of unusual films, toning, handcoloring and other topics. Fee for the class is $150 which includes lab materials. To register, call 646-4051.

THEATER REVIEW
BY JEAN THURMAN

'Morning's At Seven' a treat

MONTEREY PENINSULA College Players provide a completely satisfying evening with their production of Paul Osborn's Morning's At Seven, directed by Peter DeBono. All the elements work together, from the show-stopping set to the affable cast, to tell a delightful story from an almost fairytale time.

The time is America before the Depression, a time of contentment and well-being where life is lived at a slower pace than it is today. The setting is a small town where everybody knows everyone else's business and families live next door to each other, where the air is full of warm sunshine and twittering birdsong.

Four sisters — Cora, Ida, Aaronetta, and Esther — have remained neighbors and close friends all their lives, bringing their husbands and offspring into one extended family. Aaronetta lives with Cora and her husband Theodore, who live next door to Ida, her husband Carl, and her son Homer. Esther and her husband David live down the street.

Life has been pretty much the same for these folks for many years, until Cora sees a movie about a lonely bachelor and decides Homer must bring his fiancee of five years home to meet the family. This simple action causes major upsets in each character's life.

David, as the intellectual, tries to hold himself above the rest of the family, and considers them morons who never question or examine their lives. They may be dim, but they aren't morons, and everyone has a chance to reassess his or her life and relationships by the end of the play.

David mistakes the serenity of their lives for stagnation. The only one he sees any hope for is Carl, who has "fits" when he questions where he is in life. Scott Mattraw does a wonderful job of portraying poor, confused Carl in his quest to know himself. Ig Heniford as David pulls off the difficult job of making his character likable while he says the most despicable things.

Mary Burton and Florence Mason as Cora and Ida seem like they grew up sisters. Each makes her character sweet and simple, and a little addled. Mary Burton is especially good with Cora's single-minded fixation on getting her own home.

Gertrude Chapell is a perfect Aaronetta — sour and unhappy, throwing off caustic remarks — while Betty Fowlston is equally good as her opposite, the wise and comfortable Esther. Her jolly laugh is so contagious she infects cast and audience alike.

Dick Vreeland plays Theodore, the man shared by Cora and Aaronetta. He shows more than anyone the contentment with the familiar way of life and the anxiety involved in change.

Robin Pease's Myrtle, the fiancee, is as sweet and ingenuous as could be, but it isn't possible to believe her character to be 39 years old, which is an important part of the story.

THE ONLY player who leaves a good deal to be desired is Sid Cato, as Homer. He plays the moron that David thinks they all are. Every move is overdone and the character made completely unbelievable. This is unfortunate because it is obvious Cato has a great deal of talent and can get every nuance of meaning from a line. He should take a cue from Robin Pease on body language — her movements complement her lines; his distract.

The audience has to do some of the work of understanding a play and its characters, but Cato wants to do all the work for us, and show through word and action every thought Homer has.

The set is simply extraordinary. It is impossible to imagine the scale of it until you see it. There are two full-size houses on the MPC stage that look ready to move into tomorrow. They are identical except for details that reflect the personalities of the residents. Poor disturbed Carl can't maintain his house the way contented Theodore can.

The ending of the play is so satisfying that the audience heaves a sigh of contentment when the play is over, and the beautifully staged and lit curtain call adds to the sensation.

Morning's At Seven will play one more weekend — June 14, 15, and 16 at 8 p.m. in the MPC theater.

The play, set in a small midwestern town in the 1930s, centers on the relationships of four sisters. When the son of one sister brings home his fiancee of 12 years whom his aunts have never met, a frenzy of comedic intrigue follows.

Directed by MPC Drama Department head Peter DeBono, the cast includes many local theater personalities. They include Richard Vreeland, Lewis Heniford, Sid Cato, Gertrude Chappell, Robin Pease, Florence Mason, Scott Mattraw, Betty Fowlston and Mary Burton.

Members of the cast have dedicated the production to the memory of Ruth Marion McElroy, for many years considered the "Grand Dame" of local theater before she passed away last year.

The play finishes its run Thursday through Saturday, June 14-16.

General admission is $6. For further information, call 646-4213.

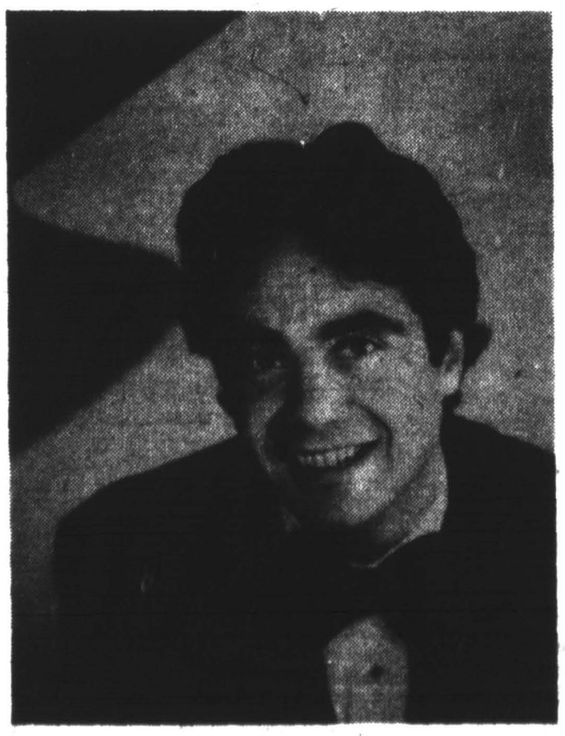
Noted soloists play in Valley

THE summer recital series at Hidden Valley Institute of the Arts continues this week.

On Saturday, June 16, Jonathan Feldman, piano virtuoso of the New Jersey Symphony, will present a solo recital.

Feldman has emerged as one of the most gifted young pianists on the American concert scene. A graduate of The Juilliard School as a scholarship student of the late Irwin Freundlich, Feldman's teachers have also included Andre Watts, Rosetta Goodkind, Edna Golandsky and Dorothy Taubman.

He enjoys an active career and gives recitals throughout the United States and abroad, and has performed as soloist with such orchestras as the St. Louis Symphony and the Boston Pops.



JONATHAN FELDMAN, piano virtuoso of the New Jersey Symphony, will present a solo recital at 8 p.m. Saturday, June 16, at the Hidden Valley Theatre in Carmel Valley.

Glenn Dicterow, concertmaster of the New York Philharmonic, will present a solo violin recital in the Hidden Valley Theatre at 8 p.m. Monday, June 18.

Dicterow made his debut with the Los Angeles Philharmonic at age 11. Since that time he has won top awards at numerous international competitions and appears with many leading American orchestras as a violin virtuoso.

He has recorded two pieces by Wieniawski, the complete chamber works of Hermann Goetz, and, accompanied by the Los Angeles Philharmonic, the violin solos for the sound track of the award-winning film The Turning Point.

This appearance marks the beginning of Dicterow's fourth annual Violin Master Class, a week-long period of intensive study and practice for students at college and professional levels. Arrangements may be made to audition for this master class by calling the Hidden Valley office, 659-3115. A fee of $15 is charged per two and one-half hour session.

Lorne Munroe, principal cellist of the New York Philharmonic, will present a solo recital at 8 p.m. Wednesday, June 20.

Lorne Munroe joined the New York Philharmonic as principal cellist at the beginning of the 1964-65 season and has since made more than 80 solo appearances with the orchestra.

While at Hidden Valley, Munroe will conduct his fourth annual cello master class. For audition information, call 659-3115.

Tickets for these recitals are $8 each. They are available at Countrywide Crafts in The Barnyard, Carmel, How to Do Anything Bookstore in Carmel, or call Hidden Valley Music Seminars, 659-3115. The theater is located off Carmel Valley Road near Ford Road in Carmel Valley.

Activities abound for anniversary weekend

June 14, 15, 16

For art buffs, several exhibitions are scheduled and will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. during the three days of the celebration.

In Room 10, the Central Coast Art Association will conduct demonstrations in all media. Pictures by Carmel artists will be highlighted in the Marjorie Evans Gallery, Carmel Art Association and the Bingham and Chapman rooms. At the Friends of Photography Gallery, photographs of Point Lobos will be exhibited.

June 14

The Children's Experimental Theatre under the direction of Marcia Hovick will perform at 5 p.m. in the Sunset Theater.

At 7 p.m., also in the theater, there will be a rising star gymnastics performance. Kathleen Christman directs the young athletes.

June 15

Tickets are required for two Friday performances: a performance by guitarist Terrence Farrell and concert by local barbershop quartets.

AT 10 a.m. Friday, the Carmel Crafts Guild will present a spinning and weaving demonstration in Room 10. A crafts demonstration will be given at 1 p.m. in Room 10 by the Carmel Foundation.

Carpenter Hall will witness back-to-back festivities on Friday, starting with a concert of Suzuki children's piano music at 1 p.m. The concert will be directed by Gloria Degn.

Early Carmel, as recalled by longtime residents, makes up the Old Timers' Round Table at 3 p.m. in Carpenter Hall. This discussion will be taped as an oral history.

Early Carmel will be revived visually at 5 p.m. with the De Yoe Slide Show.

The poetry of Robinson Jeffers, who built Tor House on Carmel Point, will be brought to life by Marcia Hovick, David Hughes and John Dotson. The reading starts at 8 p.m. in Carpenter Hall.

Terrence Farrell, classical guitarist from Carmel, will perform at 5 p.m. in Sunset Theater. Playing to packed audiences, Farrell recently returned from a tour of China, Thailand, Singapore and Hong Kong. One critic wrote of him: "A man and his music ... the sincerity of international performer, Terrence Farrell, caressed an enthusiastic audience revealing the many facets of his brilliant technique."

In his anniversary celebration program, Farrell will perform works by Villa-Lobos, Fernando Sor, Ernesto Lucuona and others. Several works from his soon-to-be-released album, Alla Romanza, will also be performed.

Barbershop harmony has rung through Sunset Center since 1956 when the local chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America — the Cypressaires — was organized.

Adding to the commemoration of Sunset's anniversary will be the Plus Four Limited Quartet. The Plus Fours, with various combinations of singers, have performed since 1958. Neil Keefer, baritone, and Leon Stutzman, bass, are original members of the quartet. Glenn Hudgens, lead, and Hank Dunning, tenor, are the newest members of the foursome.

They will perform a variety of the "good old songs" at Sunset Theater at 8 p.m. Free tickets can be obtained at the Sunset office or Harrison Memorial Library in Carmel.

ALSO BOWING at 8 p.m. Friday in Sunset Theater are members of the Monterey Bay Hot Jazz Society. The sextet will be composed of Bill Burgess, Don Pellerin, Lorene Keltner, Edna Lewis, Keith Rubrecht and Ken Blood.

This is the same group known as Dixieland, Inc. that has played for the past three years at the Forest Theater Summer Sunday afternoon programs. They recently took part in the Sacramento Jazz Jubilee.

June 16

Demonstrations of Jeanne Fosnot's sculpture and art classes will be offered at 10 a.m. Saturday in Room 10. Room 15 will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. as part of an artists' studio open house.

The De Yoe Slide Show of early Carmel is repeated at 11 a.m. Saturday in Carpenter Hall.

The Greek Village Dancers will perform and give dance demonstrations at 1 p.m. in Room 10 at the Center.

The Monterey Branch of the Music Teachers' Association of California will present a group of piano and violin students in recital at 1 p.m. in the Sunset Theater. The association presents a number of workshops and recitals during the year, and in addition offers cash scholarship awards in its annual competitive auditions each spring.

Tickets are required when Ric Masten, one of the few poet performers who carries on the oral tradition in America, appears at 2 p.m. in Carpenter Hall.

Since 1968, Masten has traveled across the country giving readings, concerts and workshops. He has been called a roving humorist, a street philosopher, and a stand-up poet and likened to such notables as Will Rogers, Ogden Nash and Pete Seeger.

"Poems composed for the ear are like music," Masten said. "And people should listen, moving along with them as such, without pausing to reflect as you would with the printed word. What I do is more song than manuscript."

A Scottish dance class demonstration, led by Susan Bernhardt, instructor, will take place at 3 p.m. in Room 10.

Old Sunset School memories will be relived in two ways Saturday afternoon. From 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. an "Avenue of Memories," which will feature old photographs plus Sunset School memorabilia, will be presented in the Theater foyer. At the same time, Reunion Sunset School Celebration is scheduled on the Terrace. Sunset School students who graduated between the years 1906 and 1964 are expected to attend.

Admission will be by ticket to a concert by members of the Monterey County Symphony at 8 p.m. in the Theater. David Dally on violin, Jill Cohen on viola and Carmen Martin on cello will present a concert of Renaissance and Baroque trios.

For details about the celebration or individual performances, call Sunset Center, 624-3996.

Dressage competition scheduled

HORSE aficionados can observe the animals closely as equines trot and canter for the 38th Annual Pebble Beach Dressage Championship. The Championships are scheduled Saturday and Sunday, June 16-17 in the Forest Arena of the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center.

Dressage judge will be Victor Hugo-Vidal, also known as "the Voice of the Garden" for his role as announcer of the prestigious horse show at Madison Square Garden.

The weekend performance will feature the Western American Championship Perpetual Trophies in addition to qualifying classes for horses in first through fourth levels.

Federation Equestre Internationale tests of choice are open to high level riders as well as a Pas de Deux class, in which one horse and rider combination must mirror the movements of another.

The Kur, open to third level riders and up, will conclude Sunday's performance. Dressage experts describe "Kur" as a sort of freestyle performance on horseback, in which one high level horse and rider combination performs a series of upper level movements in a pattern of their choice — set to music.

The public is invited to attend the dressage championships free of charge except for the normal $4 gate fee to Pebble Beach. Both performances start at 8 a.m. and continue throughout the day.

Food will be available at the Country Kitchen on the grounds of the Equestrian Center.

June jazz plays The Crossroads

"The Bye-Bye Blues Boys Band" will perform noon to 4 p.m. Saturday, June 16 at The Crossroads, Rio Road off Highway 1, Carmel. The jazz concert is free.

Alliance for Mentally Ill meets

The Alliance for the Mentally Ill will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, June 14 in the community room of The Crossroads, Rio Road off Highway 1, Carmel.
